Hitler Plans To Use Troops for Peace Drive Club

Concentrates Large Force in West in Effort To Impress Allies

By H. TAYLOR HENRY

Paris, Sept. 27. (AP)—Adolf Hitler was reported tonight to be speeding concentration of his troops on the Western front to be used as a club to induce France and Britain to discuss peace terms

Advices reaching Paris from Germany indicated the Nazi Fuehrer was preparing to make a formal offer of peace based on the status quo resulting from the partition of Poland between Germany and Soviet Russia.

Both France and Britain are officially and repeatedly on record with th declaration that there will be no peace until the Hitler regime has been destroyed and Poland's independence restored

Most military as well as diplomatic signs, however, pointed to the possibility of a German peace offer—perhaps before the end of this week.

Legion Ignores Arms Embargo in Neutrality Plea

DEMANDS EXPANSION OF U. S. ARMED FORCES

Calls for Steps To Safe-guard Nation's Peace

Chicago, Sept. 27. (AP)—The American Legion today demanded a well armed neutrality—but declined to take sides in the congressional struggle over the arms embargo.

Delegates to the twenty-first National convention of the organization adopted a resolution insisting that Congress continue in session during "the present grave crisis," that "appropriate action be taken to preserve the peace, sovereignty and dignity" of the U. S., and that "our armed forces be expanded immediately to maintain our neutrality."

No Stand on Arms

No stand was taken on the Roosevelt administration's proposal to lift the ban on shipments of implements of war to belligerent nations. The only explanation offered was this sentence:

"In the present world crisis, conditions may change so rapidly that a pronouncement by the American Legion at this time on specific legislation may be wholly inadequate in the near future."

With an expression of "full confidence in the president and the Congress," it called for steps to safeguard the nation's peace but left to the senators and representatives the job of determining how this could best be brought about.

The report of the Legion's Foreign Relations Committee on the subject was adopted by a voice vote with only one discernable dissenting vote and no debate on its contents.

However, Loenard Olson of Chicago suggested that action be deferred because he understood the resolutions committee would offer a resolution on neutrality tomorrow.

Neutrality Up to Committee

National Commander Stephen F. Chadwick ruled that neutrality was in the jurisdiction of the Foreign Relations Committee and any similar report by the resolutions group would be ruled out of order.

The Legion placed its 1,026,084 members behind moves to build the American army and navy to such size that they could turn back any invasion.

Demanded specifically in a report of the National Defense Committee that evoked applause and unanimous approval were:

"Immediate" steps by Congress to provide a supply of raw and manufactured materials so large that a naval and military force of at least 1,000,000 men could be sustained and equipped for a year.

Unconditional Surrender Of Warsaw Is Claimed in Official Nazi Statement

Polish Capital Said To Have Fallen and Will Be Handed over to Conquerors Friday

BY ALVIN J. STEINKOPF

Berlin, Sept. 27 (AP) — Besieged Warsaw, reported laid waste by bomb, shell and fire, surrendered unconditionally tonight, the Nazi high command announced.

The German communique reporting capitulation of the Polish capital after 20 days of modern siege shared attention tonight with the expectation in informed quarters that a far-reaching German-Russian accord would result from the flying visit of Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop to Moscow.

Warsaw probably will be handed over to the besieging Nazi army Sept. 29, the high command said, and General Johannes Von Blaskowitz has been ordered to arrange the terms of surrender.

Radio Urges Resistance

(The Warsaw radio, which almost throughout the siege had been on the air with exhortations to Warsaw's citizens and soldiers to resist the invaders, was heard in Budapest as late as 2:45 P. M today,—8:45 A. M., E.S.T. its announcer insisted the city still held out and would resist to the last).

The German high command, after the first brief announcement, issued a second communique as follows:

"Warsaw has capitulated unconditionally. Formal surrender of the city to the German army command will take place September 29. (Friday).

"It is established the military garrison (Polish) occupying the city exceeds 100,000 men."

Reports reaching the German side indicated conditions approaching civil war prevailed in Warsaw during the final stages of the siege with a considerable faction within the city demanding submission to the German terms.

100,000 Will Surrender

It was believed these terms included surrender of the Warsaw garrison of more than 100,000 men as prisoners of war.

Predictions that a Russian-German deal would be brought about swiftly were made in official circles today and it was said the Germans obviously expected the Moscow negotiations to have an important bearing on the conduct of the war and the possibility of extension of German influence in southeastern Europe.

"After the lightning war in Europe follow lightning negotiations in Moscow," was the phrase used at the foreign office.

Attention also was called to the fact that Turkish and Estonian foreign ministers also are in Moscow and one spokesman asserted

With the German Army on the Western Front, Sept. 27 (AP) — An air skirmish 10,000 feet above a ghost city — Saarbruecken — in which six German pursuit planes chased after one French plane, the dealing of random shots known to Germans as the "vesper blessing", and artillery fire five miles from Zwiebruecken to a point one and a quarter miles outside the city — these were all that happened on the Western front so far as I could see today.

Today's journey took me from Trier on the Moselle river past the Reich's first line of defense, then along the Saar river and the Saar valley to Kaiserlautern in the Palatinates — always following the Siegfried line.

Escaped Polish Flier Describes Fate of Warsaw

NEW FIRES EACH DAY CAUSED BY NAZI BOMBS

Declares City is a Horrible Sight from the Air

By ELMER W. PETERSON

Budapest, Sept. 27 (AP)—A Polish army flier who took off from a bomb-pitted field in the heart of Warsaw and escaped through a barrage of German shells told a grim story today of tragic scenes in the besieged Polish capital.

He was Lieut. Col. Mateus Izycki, one of seven pilots who attempted to fly out of Warsaw at dawn last Monday. The make-shift plane he piloted made a safe landing somewhere in Hungary and today he made his way to Budapest. What became of his fellow airmen, he doesn't know.

The stocky officer, his blue eyes rimmed with lines of fatigue, told of civilians creeping from cellars between air raids and artillery bombardments to bury the dead in parks and public squares.

There was no time for religious services at the hurried burials, which he said were held against a backdrop of incessant rumbling from besieging guns.

New Fires Each Day

The colonel related that a thick black pall, which never lifts, hangs over the city, growing blacker each day with new fires added to the flames of Warsaw.

In a voice which at times sank to a whisper he said: "Warsaw can not last forever—but will for a while."

(A German communique in Berlin today said the Polish capital had surrendered "unconditionally.")

200 Raiding Planes a Day

"The city is ringed by six divisions of German soldiers whose artillery is pouring in shells unceasingly, aided by an average of 200 raiding planes a day.

"Warsaw is a city where from 40 to 60 new fires start daily from incendiary bombs. Only small fires can be handled; the big ones are left to burn.

"It is a city where priests say mass in wrecked churches; a city of never ending bedlam where heavy bombs go crashing through four or five floors and topple an entire building.

"There's a no-mans land strewn with dead men, women and horses. Across this area, except where the Germans have reached outlying houses, our own artillery replies from behind barricades of overturned street cars, sandbags, buildings, stones and captured German tanks.

Not a Ship Hit, London Asserts; Plane Carrier Destroyed, Berlin Says

By ROBERT BUNNELLE

London, Sept. 27 (AP) — Britain tonight hailed the admiralty's claim of victory against the first mass attack of German aircraft on British warships — a claim disputed in Berlin — as a satisfactory reply to the question of whether British sea-power could withstand war from the air.

(The Berlin communique asserted the Nazi air force "successfully attacked" British capital ships in the North Sea, "destroying" an aircraft carrier and scoring severe hits on a battleship.)

Calls Raid a Failure

British tacticians called yesterday's German aerial raid on a home fleet squadron in the North Sea "a complete failure". Naval circles promptly boasted there was no fear for Britain's continued mastery of the seas in the face of this new German effort to break it.

The British version of the engagement was given to the House of Commons by Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, after an inquiry by Laborite A. V. Alexander as to the truth of a German communique claiming Nazi aircraft had destroyed a British airplane carrier, scored "several severe hits on one battleship" and escaped unscathed.

Score of Planes Attack

Churchill said the home fleet commander, Admiral Sir Charles Forbes, reported that approximately a score of German planes attacked a squadron of British capital ships together with an aircraft carrier, cruisers and destroyers.

"No British ship was hit and no British casualties were incurred," said Churchill. "One German flying boat was shot down and another was reported badly damaged."

The House cheered vociferously, and then he added that another German plane came down in the North Sea and with her crew of four was picked up by a British destroyer.

MOVIE SCOUT FACES DEATH AS MURDERER

Jefferson Guilty Of Brutal Murder Of Frances Dunn

Bogus Movie Scout Doomed To Be Executed in Florida

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 27 (AP)—Charles Jefferson, bogus talent scout who confessed slaying a 17-year-old movie struck schoolgirl, was convicted tonight of first degree murder without a recommendation of mercy. The death sentence is mandatory.

The jury, which had heard Jefferson admit killing pretty Frances Dunn of Miami with a hammer and a butcher knife, deliberated four hours and five minutes, returning the verdict at 11:10 p. m. (EST).

Jefferson smiled wanly and thanked his court-appointed counsel. There was no demonstration in the packed courtroom.

Appeal May Be Taken

The defendant's counsel had said he would appeal to the Supreme Court if Jefferson were sentenced to death.

Minister Says He Approved Plot To Murder Daughter

Camden, N. J., Sept. 27 (AP)—A minister on trial for the slaying of his daughter was quoted today as admitting he approved an earlier attempt to kill her because he was afraid her misconduct would cost him his pulpit.

The earlier attack on his 18-year-old daughter, Wanda, the Rev. Walter Dworecki said in a statement read by a court clerk, was made by John Rocco and John Popolo, both material witnesses in the case.

"I took $1,000 insurance in March on Wanda, because I promised to pay the men for that job," Dworecki's statement said.

A month later, the girl was beaten unconscious and left on a roadside. She recovered after weeks in a hospital only to be strangled to death the night of August 7.

The state charges the minister hired Peter Shewchuk, 21-year-old former carnival employe, to kill her. Insurance totalling $2,500 was carried on her life. Shewchuk is awaiting trial.

"Wanda got in trouble some years ago with a boy and always was trying to sneak out," the statement credited to Dworecki said. "The secretary of the church told me I was going to be thrown out if Wanda got into any more trouble.

"Rocco and Popolo came to the house and told me to insure her and they would do away with her."

Popolo testified yesterday the minister offered him $1,000 to do away with the girl and that he refused.

500 Czech Shoe Workers Seeking To Enter U. S., Rep. Rogers Says

Waschington, Sept. 27 (AP)—Representative Rogers (R-Mass) said today the Bata Shoe Company was seeking permission to bring 500 Czechoslovakian shoe workers to the United States "under the guise of visitors to the World's Fair."

Mrs. Rogers declared they probably would be assigned to work at Bata's new Maryland shoe factory, where she said 100 Czechs already had been employed.

She declared she har protested to the immigration service and state departments against admission of the Czechs to this country, asserting it would be "an injustice to thousands of American shoe workers now unemployed."

The CIO's United Shoe Workers previously had protested to Secretary Perkins against entry of 100 Czech shoe workers union officials said were employed in the Maryland plant.

Despite annexation of Czechoslovakia by Germany, commerce officials said today the Bata Shoe Company was shipping to the United States approximately the same number of shoes as when the Czech nation was independent.

Shipments have been diverted from the main Bata plant at Zlin, Czechoslovakia, to a Netherlands factory.

Since the annexation of the Czech nation by Germany, the United States has cancelled a reciprocal trade agreement, which gave the Zlin plant a preferential duty, and has applied a twenty-five per cent excise tax on imports from German territory.

Commerce officials said Bata was seeking a location for factory in South America to serve Latin American nations.

Bata is the chief exporter of low-priced shoes to the United States.

Woman Must Die For Phila. Murder

Philadelphia, Sept. 27 (AP) — A woman was doomed to death and a man to life imprisonment today in first-degree murder verdicts returned in Philadelphia's murder-for-insurance ring trials.

Mrs. Grace Giovanetti, 45, twice married, was convicted in the poison death of her first husband, Pietro Piorolli. The jury made the death sentence mandatory.

A few hours later, a verdict was returned against Emedio Muscelli, 31-year-old baker, in the death of Guiseppe Di Martino. The jury recommended life imprisonment.

Four defendants now have been convicted, three with mandatory death sentences, in connection with the 50 to 100 deaths that investigators have attributed to the ring in several eastern states in the past 10 years.

Three others have pleaded guilty to murder. None has been sentenced.

Another defendant, Paul Petrillo, is on trial in the poison death of Luigi La Vecchio.

Warsaw's Radio Describes Last Stand of Troops and Civilians

Budapest, Sept. 27. (AP)—Hymns were substituted for stirring military marches today as the Warsaw radio came back to life to tell with dramatic pauses the Polish story of the lingering hours of the German siege.

(An official Berlin announcement said at 8:17 p. m. that the city had surrendered unconditionally and probably would be occupied Sept. 29).

The station — silent since early Monday morning—returned suddenly to the air at 2:15 p. m. to describe the "destroyed inferno" as bombs, shells and fire tore and burned the once beautiful city into ruins.

The announcer told a story of the deaths of more than 3,000 civilians today, the failure of the city water supply and fear of plague—and still of the resistance of the Polish troops on the 20th day of the siege.

Because the Germans could not capture the city, asserted the announcer, "they are systematically ruining it, one district after another, so the Polish soldier will have nothing more to defend, no reason for wanting to live."

He said the Modlin forts, 18 miles northwest of the capital, still were holding out and just then a dull booming came over the microphone.

The speaker paused, then said, "our troops are defending us and they will continue to protect us."

Dull roars shook the microphone near the finish and the speaker stammered from time to time.

It seemed as if the studio was being shaken violently.

The announcer pleaded for aid from Poland's allies and declared the morale of defenders and civilians was excellent.

This is how he described the situ-

By ELMER W. PETERSON

Budapest, Sept. 27 (AP)—A Polish army flier who took off from a bomb-pitted field in the heart of Warsaw and escaped through a barrage of German shells told a grim story today of tragic scenes in the besieged Polish capital.

He was Lieut. Col. Mateus Izycki, one of seven pilots who attempted to fly out of Warsaw at dawn last Monday. The make-shift plane he piloted made a safe landing somewhere in Hungary and today he made his way to Budapest. What became of his fellow airmen, he doesn't know.

The stocky officer, his blue eyes rimmed with lines of fatigue, told of civilians creeping from cellars between air raids and artillery bombardments to bury the dead in parks and public squares.

There was no time for religious services at the hurried burials, which he said were held against a backdrop of incessant rumbling from besieging guns.

New Fires Each Day

The colonel related that a thick black pall, which never lifts, hangs over the city, growing blacker each day with new fires added to the flames of Warsaw.

In a voice which at times sank to a whisper he said: "Warsaw can not last forever—but will for a while."

(A German communique in Berlin today said the Polish capital had surrendered "unconditionally.")

200 Raiding Planes a Day

"The city is ringed by six divisions of German soldiers whose artillery is pouring in shells unceasingly, aided by an average of 200 raiding planes a day.

"Warsaw is a city where from 40 to 60 new fires start daily from incendiary bombs. Only small fires can be handled; the big ones are left to burn.

"It is a city where priests say mass in wrecked churches; a city of never ending bedlam where heavy bombs go crashing through four or five floors and topple an entire building.

"There's a no-mans land strewn with dead men, women and horses. Across this area, except where the Germans have reached outlying houses, our own artillery replies from behind barricades of overturned street cars, sandbags, buildings, stones and captured German tanks.

Not a Ship Hit, London Asserts; Plane Carrier Destroyed, Berlin Says

By ROBERT BUNNELLE

London, Sept. 27 (AP) — Britain tonight hailed the admiralty's claim of victory against the first mass attack of German aircraft on British warships — a claim disputed in Berlin — as a satisfactory reply to the question of whether British seapower could withstand war from the air.

(The Berlin communique asserted the Nazi air force "successfully attacked" British capital ships in the North Sea, "destroying" an aircraft carrier and scoring severe hits on a battleship.)

Calls Raid a Failure

British tacticians called yesterday's German aerial raid on a home fleet squadron in the North Sea "a complete failure". Naval circles promptly boasted there was no fear for Britain's continued mastery of the seas in the face of this new German effort to break it.

The British version of the engagement was given to the House of Commons by Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, after an inquiry by Laborite A. V. Alexander as to the truth of a German communique claiming Nazi aircraft had destroyed a British airplane carrier, scored "several severe hits on one battleship" and escaped unscathed.

Score of Planes Attack

Churchill said the home fleet commander, Admiral Sir Charles Forbes, reported that approximately a score of German planes attacked a squadron of British capital ships together with an aircraft carrier, cruisers and destroyers.

"No British ship was hit and no British casualties were incurred," said Churchill. "One German flying boat was shot down and another was reported badly damaged."

The House cheered vociferously, and then he added that another German plane came down in the North Sea and with her crew of four was picked up by a British destroyer.

MOVIE SCOUT FACES DEATH AS MURDERER

Charles Jefferson (above), who was convicted last night of the murder of Frances Dunn, testified he did not know why he killed her.

Bogus Movie Scout Doomed To Be Executed in Florida

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 27. (AP)—Charles Jefferson, bogus talent scout who confessed slaying a 17-year-old movie struck schoolgirl, was convicted tonight of first degree murder without a recommendation of mercy. The death sentence is mandatory.

The jury, which had heard Jefferson admit killing pretty Frances Dunn of Miami with a hammer and a butcher knife, deliberated four hours and five minutes, returning the verdict at 11:10 p. m. (EST).

Jefferson smiled wanly and thanked his court-appointed counsel. There was no demonstration in the packed courtroom.

Appeal May Be Taken

The defendant's counsel had said he would appeal to the Supreme Court if Jefferson were sentenced to death.

Minister Says He Approved Plot To Murder Daughter

Camden, N. J., Sept. 27 (AP)—A minister on trial for the slaying of his daughter was quoted today as admitting he approved an earlier attempt to kill her because he was afraid her misconduct would cost him his pulpit.

The earlier attack on his 18-year-old daughter, Wanda, the Rev. Walter Dworecki said in a statement read by a court clerk, was made by John Rocco and John Popolo, both material witnesses in the case.

"I took $1,000 insurance in March on Wanda, because I promised to pay the men for that job," Dworecki's statement said.

A month later, the girl was beaten unconscious and left on a roadside. She recovered after weeks in a hospital only to be strangled to death the night of August 7.

The state charges the minister hired Peter Shewchuk, 21-year-old former carnival employe, to kill her. Insurance totalling $2,500 was carried on her life. Shewchuk is awaiting trial.

"Wanda got in trouble some years ago with a boy and always was trying to sneak out," the statement credited to Dworecki said. "The secretary of the church told me I was going to be thrown out if Wanda got into any more trouble.

"Rocco and Popolo came to the house and told me to insure her and they would do away with her."

Popolo testified yesterday the minister offered him $1,000 to do away with the girl and that he refused.

500 Czech Shoe Workers Seeking To Enter U. S., Rep. Rogers Says

Waschington, Sept. 27 (AP)—Representative Rogers (R-Mass) said today the Bata Shoe Company was seeking permission to bring 500 Czechoslovakian shoe workers to the United States "under the guise of visitors to the World's Fair."

Mrs. Rogers declared they probably would be assigned to work at Bata's new Maryland shoe factory, where she said 100 Czechs already had been employed.

She declared she har protested to the immigration service and state departments against admission of the Czechs to this country, asserting it would be "an injustice to thousands of American shoe workers now unemployed."

The CIO's United Shoe Workers previously had protested to Secretary Perkins against entry of 100 Czech shoe workers union officials said were employed in the Maryland plant.

Despite annexation of Czechoslovakia by Germany, commerce officials said today the Bata Shoe Company was shipping to the United States approximately the same number of shoes as when the Czech nation was independent.

Shipments have been diverted from the main Bata plant at Zlin, Czechoslovakia, to a Netherlands factory.

Since the annexation of the Czech nation by Germany, the United States has cancelled a reciprocal trade agreement, which gave the Zlin plant a preferential duty, and has applied a twenty-five per cent excise tax on imports from German territory.

Commerce officials said Bata was seeking a location for factory in South America to serve Latin American nations.

Bata is the chief exporter of low-priced shoes to the United States.

Warsaw's Radio Describes Last Stand of Troops and Civilians

Budapest, Sept. 27. (AP)—Hymns were substituted for stirring military marches today as the Warsaw radio came back to life to tell with dramatic pauses the Polish story of the lingering hours of the German siege.

(An official Berlin announcement said at 8:17 p. m. that the city had surrendered unconditionally and probably would be occupied Sept. 29).

The station — silent since early Monday morning—returned suddenly to the air at 2:15 p. m. to describe the "destroyed inferno" as bombs, shells and fire tore and burned the once beautiful city into ruins.

The announcer told a story of the deaths of more than 3,000 civilians today, the failure of the city water supply and fear of plague—and still of the resistance of the Polish troops on the 20th day of the siege.

Because the Germans could not capture the city, asserted the announcer, "they are systematically ruining it, one district after another, so the Polish soldier will have nothing more to defend, no reason for wanting to live."

He said the Modlin forts, 18 miles northwest of the capital, still were holding out and just then a dull booming came over the microphone.

The speaker paused, then said, "our troops are defending us and they will continue to protect us."

Dull roars shook the microphone near the finish and the speaker stammered from time to time.

It seemed as if the studio was being shaken violently.

The announcer pleaded for aid from Poland's allies and declared the morale of defenders and civilians was excellent.

Ship Operators Fear Loss under Neutrality Law

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Sept. 27. (AP)—Ship operators, fearing a sharp reduction in their business under the pending neutrality resolution, protested sharply today to congressional leaders in charge of that measure.

Their requests for changes in the resolution were met, it was said, with a firm "no" and a statement that the legislation was intended to keep this country out of war, with other considerations secondary.

The congressional leaders further told the shipping people that if, by January, when Congress meets in regular session, the act should appear to be working to their serious disadvantage, legislation could be enacted then for the relief of the shippers.

Big Lines Protest

The protests came, it was said, from the United States lines, from the Dollar Line, from firms operating their own ships to import fruit from South and Central America and the islands of the Caribbean, and from Pan American Airways.

All were concerned about the provision of the law forbidding American ships and aircraft to transport any materials whatsoever to belligerent countries. The application of this provision to the British and French possessions to the south of the United States was of particular concern to the fruit companies and the airline.

The latter, on its passenger route to South America, makes several stops at French and British points. Chairman Pittman (D-Nev) of the Foreign Relations Committee, the author of the resolution, was reliably reported to have said that under the proposed law, Pan-American air liners could continue to stop at these points for refueling, but could discharge neither passengers nor freight.

May Change Bill

While there were some indications that changes might be made on this point when the bill reaches the floor of the Senate, the managers of the bill were refusing all pleas for amendments at this time, for fear of opening the legislation up to general revision.

Some legislators who have always been interested in the American merchant marine were talking today of an arrangement whereby normal trade with Central and South America and the Caribbean would be exempted from the law.

Another development today was a luncheon conference between Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Senator Borah (R-Ida), a leader of the bloc opposing repeal of the present embargo on arms shipments to belligerents.

Lindbergh May Speak

Borah was uncommunicative beyond telling reporters that neutrality legislation and the embargo were under discussion. He intimated that Lindbergh might soon make another radio speech.

Reporters reminded Lindbergh himself that his first radio address, urging strict aloofness for the United States, and the fact that he lunched yesterday with a group favoring repeal of the embargo, had resulted in much speculation as to where he stood on the embargo question. His only reply was:

"Well, it (the speech) is still there to read."

During the day, managers of both sides in the coming Senate controversy over the embargo made arrangements covering the disposition of that issue. It was tentatively decided that the resolution, which includes the proposed repealer, should be reported out when the foreign relations committee meets tomorrow, and be brought before the Senate on Monday.

On that day Pittman is scheduled to open the debate with a speech in behalf of the resolution, with Borah leading off for the opposition Tuesday.

Unconditional Surrender Of Warsaw Is Claimed in Official Nazi Statement

events have impressed on Turkey the "wisdom of perhaps revising her estimate of the value of a British guarantee."

Turks Change Policy

He said an appreciable turn in the Turkish foreign policy, which he termed agreeable to Germany, already had been noted.

He emphasized current military questions involving Russia had been settled with acceptance of the military demarcation line in Poland that Von Ribbentrop's conversations would be largely in the political field with the largest question being the fate of Poland.

There still was no hint whether Russia and Germany were inclined toward the complete elimination of Poland or the establishment of a small Polish buffer state.

It was conceded here that a further German-Russian accord might have repercussions in the far east, with the attitude of Japan still unclarified.

Negotiations in Progress

Meanwhile it was presumed in Berlin that negotiations for the surrender of Warsaw to the encircling German troops were in progress.

A spokesman clarifying the situation said Germany had refrained for a week from assaulting Warsaw and that this restraint apparently was misinterpreted as weakness by the Polish command.

So force was reapplied and after the capture of outward defenses and a thrust toward the central railway station by the Germans, a Polish offer of surrender was received this morning.

"The resistance of Warsaw was completely hopeless and had nothing to do with heroism," a spokesman said.

There was elation in naval circles over the report that German planes had "destroyed" an unnamed British airplane carrier in the middle of the North Sea and had damaged a battleship.

The German high command ridiculed British statements that German aviators had missed their targets and that German planes had been shot down.

Russian proposals." Dispatches received there from Moscow said considerable speculation prevailed in the Russian capital on the possibility that Russia had made strong demands on Estonia for maritime rights.

Holds First Conference

Von Ribbentrop held the first conference of his second historic visit to Moscow tonight with Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff in the Kremlin. It was not disclosed immediately whether Joseph Stalin attended.

The German foreign minister arrived less than five hours earlier, accompanied by Albert Forster, Adolf Hitler's leader in Danzig before the Free City was annexed to Germany.

Three planes bearing his party was greeted by a brass band and an honor guard and Vladimir Potemkin, vice-commissar of foreign affairs, headed the Soviet official welcoming committee. The airport was decorated with inter-twined Russian and Nazi banners.

Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso was the only foreign diplomat who put in an appearance for the welcome.

Three Possibilities

Diplomats said the possibilities of the conference were three-fold; the signing of a German-Soviet military agreement; formation of a new Balkan-near eastern bloc under the guidance of Turkey and Russia; and a joint German-Soviet request that Turkey act as intermediary in attempts to negotiate peace in eastern Europe.

Credence was lent to reports that Japan was playing an important part in the Moscow negotiations when it was learned that Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo conferred last night with Molotoff.

Russia has bitterly criticized Estonia following the escape of the interned Polish submarine Orzel last Monday from Tallinn harbor. The craft was interned after it sought refuge in the Estonian port.

A communique last night said Estonia's explanation of the incident had been "unsatisfactory." It went on to say that "one can arrive at the conclusion that some unknown submarines have a secret base somewhere near the Estonian coast" and added:

"In consequence of these circumstances the question of ensuring the security of Soviet waters agaist diversionist acts on the part of hiding submarines acquires great importance."

The government's announcement of the sinking of the Mettalist said the attack occurred near Narva Bay, on the northern coast of Estonia. Soviet patrol ships were said to have rescued 19 of her crew of 24.

Last night's communique cited reports from Leningrad that "periscopes of unknown submarines" had been sighted near Luga, in the Gulf of Finland near where the Mettalist was said to have been sunk.

A. P. Writer and German Officers Near French Line

privates with whom I talked, said not a single German pillbox had had to return French fire.

The Germans reported that the only fighting, outside of occasional exchanges in the air, that occurs daily is near Zweibruecken. This the Germans call the "vesper blessing" because of its regularity about 6 p. m.

Not Much Harm Done

At that time the sun is at the backs of the French and the German positions are best visible to them. Not much harm is done, however, on either side, the Germans said.

Saarbruecken, an industrial city of 69,000 inhabitants, with valuable steel and iron works, is dead.

Yet the French, so far as I could observe today, make no effort either to seize it — which might cost considerable loss of life because of strong German fortifications surrounding it — or to shell it directly.

Close to French Lines

With our military escorts, I entered the dead city with two other American newsmen in full view of the French. It appeared that had they desired, the French easily could have picked us for easy marks.

The German officers accompanying us made no effort to conceal their uniforms indicating their rank.

Nothing happened.

We were able to press forward to a street only one mile away from the French line.

gagement of the war between sea and air forces. On Sept. 5 Britain reported a flight of its planes raided German warships at Kiel, inflicting heavy damage by dive-bombing. The British confessed to casualties during the raid. Some of their fliers were taken prisoner.

British accounts of the latest attack, 150 miles off the Norwegian coast, attributed the failure of the Germans to score hits to their reluctance to dive low in the face of British anti-aircraft fire.

Naval men here asserted it is extremely difficult for aircraft to score hits on ships at sea. They said squadrons could easily carry out zigzag maneuvers and bring into play anti-aircraft guns of such caliber as to make low flying attacks "suicidal."

Much Contraband Seized

The ministry of information announced that 255,000 tons of contraband, chiefly iron ore and petroleum products, had been seized since the beginning of the war, including more than 70,000 tons taken during the week ended yesterday.

Churchill also told Commons that the $20,000,000 German liner Bremen, unreported since sailing from New York Aug. 30, was "believed to be in a North Russian port." Earlier the Bremen had been reported to have reached Murmansk, Soviet Arctic port.

Bergdoll Says He Hid in America For Seven Years

Draft Dodger Tells Surprising Story at His Trial

New York, Sept. 27 (AP)—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll calmly informed a general court martial today that during seven of the nineteen years he was supposedly a fugitive in Germany he was actually living in his mother's home in Philadelphia.

Moreover, the World war's "No. 1 draft dodger" swore he had recovered the $105,000 in gold which he told army authorities in 1920 he had buried in a Maryland hillside. Actually, Bergdoll testified, the money was hidden in a closet in his mother's home.

Mrs. Emma Bergdoll, his aged mother, corroborated his testimony at his trial for desertion and escape and added, under the questioning of the civilian defense counsel, Harry Weinberger, that she had invested much of the money, perhaps $90,000, in Liberty bonds.

His pretty blonde German-born wife, Berta, also corroborated her husband's testimony.

Bergdoll, now grown plump and middle-aged, said he visited the United States twice during the period of his self-imposed exile, staying four years the first time, and three years the second, but never venturing from the Bergdoll "castle" in Wynnefield avenue, Philadelphia.

As artfully as he dodged the military authorities, he dodged the immigration laws, he disclosed. The first time he came home was in 1929, Bergdoll said. He traveled on a passport, issued to J. Amman, a German hotel porter; the second time under the name of John Sparks.

Weinberger put Bergdoll on the stand to combat the army's contention that the statute of limitations was still in force since the time spent out of the jurisdiction of the army doesn't count. The statute of limitations, Weinberger said, was two years.

Before Bergdoll testified, the army prosecutor, Maj. Archer Lerch, called Eugene (Ike) Stecher, former Bergdoll family chauffeur, who fled with Bergdoll to Germany and remained there five years; and Technical Sergeant Frank Zimmer, who identified Bergdoll as the man he tried to arrest in Eberbach, Germany, in 1921.

The government hoped in this way to establish a prima facie case of Bergdoll's long residence in Germany; and even produced a passport application made on Oct. 1, 1934, in which he swore he had lived in Germany since 1920.

Weinberger's move, therefore, was something of a surprise.

Bergdoll, dressed in the dark brown uniform of a general military prisoner, watched the proceedings with apparent indifference. The air in the makeshift courtroom in the gymnasium of the Y.M.C.A., on Governors Island was chilly, the spectators few.

From this same island he had set out under guard on May 20, 1920, following his conviction as a draft evader, to recover the "pot of gold" he insisted he had buried in Western Maryland. He escaped during the trip.

He is serving five years as a draft evader, since his voluntary return from Germany and voluntary surrender, last May, and he may get five years more on conviction of escape and desertion.

Jefferson Guilty of Brutal Murder of Frances Dunn

verdict was impossible because premeditation had not been proven.

The 29-year-old prisoner, appearing as the sole defense witness, readily admitted clubbing and stabbing the pretty, brunette dramatics student the day after he lured her and Jean Bolton from their Miami homes with promises of a chance in the movies.

Denies Criminal Assault

But he denied rape preceded the killing and said he struck only after Miss Dunn and Miss Bolton had quarreled bitterly about aiding him in carrying out a kidnaping hoax for publicity purposes.

The tall defendant also insisted Miss Bolton stood by while he struck down her schoolmate, contradicting the blonde night club singer's testimony that she sat terror stricken in Jefferson's car while he raped and killed Miss Dunn some distance away in a thicket.

Jefferson said after he had driven the girls to a lonely beach road north of Miami early last August, he announced to them they were being kidnaped and Jean suggested such an abduction might prove good nationwide publicity for a coming movie career.

But Miss Dunn refused to join in such a hoax, he said, and while she and Jean quarreled he struck down Frances with a hammer, then got his gun from the car and fired once at her, apparently missing.

Knew She Was Dying

"Frances fell back, just sitting, leaning on her hands," he continued. "She started jerking. I'd never seen anybody die before, but I knew she was dying."

He said the jerking continued and he stabbed his victim before she died.

He was asked whether Miss Bolton had anything to do with the killing.

"No. Nothing whatever. She just stood there with her hands over her face.

When asked why he hit his victim, he replied in a bare whisper.

"I wish I knew."

Walsh Names Harvey Attorney for Fund

Baltimore, Sept. 27. (AP)—Attorney General William C. Walsh announced today the appointment of J. Edgar Harvey of Salisbury as special attorney for the state accident fund, succeeding Albert A. Levin.

Harvey, former president of the Wicomico County Bar Association, will take over his new duties Monday. He will receive $4,000 a year.

Levin was appointed to the post in 1935 by Governor Herbert R. O'Conor, then attorney general. He tendered his resignation last May and asked that it be effective June 1, but Walsh asked that he remain in office until fall. Levin will devote all his time to private practice.

The new assistant is a native of Salisbury and has practiced law in Salisbury since 1929, when he received his degree from the University of Maryland. He is unmarried.

Communists Raise Millions in U. S. for Russia, Witness Says

Washington, Sept. 27. (AP)—Dr. David H. Dubrowsky, who formerly represented the Russian Red Cross in the United States, estimated before the Dies committee today that Americans and their government were contributing $17,500,000 a year to the coffers of the Soviet Union.

This sum, Chairman Dies (D-Tex) said, was more than sufficient to finance what he referred to as "Communist espionage and sabotage activities" in this country.

Such activities, Dubrowsky testified in Russian-accented English, included the theft of United States mail by Russian secret police agents and plots to intercept cables and telegrams through minor employes of communications companies.

Dubrowsky said he felt qualified to make the estimates because of 16 years close association with the Moscow government and its subsidiary agencies, adding that his figure did not include money contributed to Russia by the American Communist party and "Communist front" organizations in this country.

His total included:

$8,000,000 in "duties" and "licenses" on food and clothing sent by Americans to the needy in Russia.

$5,000,000 from Russian motion pictures distributed in this country.

$2,400,000 from Bookniga, Russian book distributing agency in this country.

$1,200,000 from Inreklama, an agency which he said operated a "kick back racket" by soliciting Russian newspaper advertising from concerns which sell to the Soviet's Amtorg Trading Corporation.

$500,000 from Iniurcollegia, an agency which collects estate and insurance money from Russian claimants and which Dubrowsky said kept most of it for governmental purpose.

$400,000 from the U. S. Veterans Administration in pensions and benefits made out to residents of Russia. Most of this total, the witness declared, was intercepted by the Russian government and used for propaganda and other activities in the United States.

Hitler Plans To Use Troops for Peace Drive Club

eign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, to Moscow today ostensibly to put the finishing touches on the partition of Poland.

Actually von Ribbentrop was reported in Paris to be trying to persuade Joseph Stalin to sign or at least give the impression that he is willing to sign a military alliance which Germany could use as a threat against the French and British unless they were willing to call off the war on his terms.

It was for the same reason that Hitler was believed to have issued urgent orders to his high command to clear up Poland quickly so there would be no semblance of resistance left there to which France and Britain could point.

Trains were said to be moving in a steady stream across Germany, pouring more and more troops into the Siegrried fortifications. Squadron after squadron of warplanes were reported shifted to the west.

Armies Not in Action

It was obvious, however, the Germans on the western front had made no real use of the forces concentrated there.

The reason was considered to be that the Germans did not want large-scale operations to start against France and Britain for fear of endangering any chances for peace.

Until now the Nazis have appeared content to take the usual measures to defend their fortress line and hamper the French advance into German territory as much as possible without joining a battle which would be difficult to break off.

Operations on the western front tonight provided an illustration of this apparent German strategy.

German artillery was concentrating its fire on the four main salients which the French have driven into Nazi territory.

Hold Troops in Leash

At the same time, the German tactics appeared to be to try to keep the French high command constantly aware of the immense German forces being held on leash.

The heaviest fire from the German guns battered the area behind the Lauter river, across which the French hold a wedged salient in Bienwald forest.

The Germans used long-range field pieces to hurl big shells across the river into deserted towns as deep as four miles back in French territory.

Nazi shells ripped holes in the strategic French highway from Hagenau northwest to Wissembourg on the western edges of the Bienwald.

Except for intermittent shelling the Saarbruecken sector, where the French salient lies east of the city, remained quiet.

A heavier artillery duel was resumed 25 miles farther west where the French lines bend almost to the banks of the Saar river between the German cities of Merzig and Saarlouis.

The first nip of cold weather hit the western front today. Paris hospitals and relief organizations received urgent calls for doctors, ambulances and warm clothing to be distributed to civilians still in the zone just behind the front.

Britain Increases Tax Rate To Raise Cash for the War

Incomes Will Be Taxed 35 Per Cent until Next March 31

By HUGH WAGNON

London, Sept. 27 (AP) — Britain marshaled today her great army of taxpayers, rich and poor alike, to bear the heaviest tax burden ever undertaken by the nation to finance the war against Germany.

Seeking to meet an estimated £2,000,000,000 ($8,000,000,000 — correct) outlay in the current fiscal year, greatly increased by the costs of war, the budget presented to the House of Commons called for a 35 percent standard tax on income until next March 31, when the fiscal year ends.

For 1940-41 the rate will rise to 37.5 percent; until today it was 27.5 percent.

The burden on the poor was increased by lowering the exemption marks at which taxation begins.

Foreigners Taxed

Foreigners resident in Britain must pay at the same rate as British subjects.

The average Briton gasped at unexpectedly drastic increases on income, beer, sugar, wine, tobacco, whisky, estates, surtaxes and excess profits, but the news shared proud front-page headlines asserting the home fleet had scored against German warplanes in a sea engagement.

"If the price of victory be high, it is a price worth paying," Sir John Simon, tall, gaunt chancellor of the exchequer, told a cheering House of Commons as he presented the war budget.

"It is the price of our liberty and all that makes life worth living in Europe and for ourselves."

Londoners hailed the budget as the best possible proof of the nation's determination to carry out a supreme war effort.

More welcome, though, was First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill's announcement that a squadron of British capital ships, destroyers and aircraft carriers repulsed an attack by 20 German aircraft in the North Sea yesterday.

Wilbur R. Davis Gets Five Years For Bank Holdup

United States Marine Says He Robbed To Get Out of Trouble

Baltimore, Sept. 17 (AP) — Wilbur Russell Davis, 20-year-old United States Marine whose superior testified his service for the past three years had been excellent, was sentenced to five years in the federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., today for a $2,500 holdup of the Annapolis Bank and Trust Company Aug. 9.

The marine's side of it, as he testified in court, was brief:

"I had been in financial trouble and wanted to get out of it."

In court, and weeping as federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut passed sentence, was the marine's young wife. Two weeks before the hold-up, testimoney disclosed, she had filed suit for divorce. Part of the loot, it was testified, had been given her. Davis explaining that it was an inheritance.

Major Emery E. Larson, navy football coach and Davis' superior officer, testified that the young marine's record was excellent. Davis, who said he was from Shreveport, La., had been assigned to the marine detail at the naval academy.

Officers said $1,929 was recovered.

Davis pleaded guilty, and prosecution testimony was brief.

W. E. Wiley, bank teller, said Davis appeared at his window and pushed across a bag and a note reading:

"This is a stickup. Put $2,500 in the bag or I'll blow the place up."

One of Davis' hands, Wiley said, was wrapped in a handkerchief.

Given the money, Davis fled on foot, jumping several fences and escaping in a chase with police. He was arrested several days later by federal bureau of investigation agents, who entered the case because the bank was insured under the Federal Isurance Act.

The candidates for national commander are Raymond J. Kelly, Detroit, Mich., Jack Crowley, Rutland, Vt. Ray Fields, Guthrie, Okla., Howard Scheiberling, Albany, N. Y., Lynn Stambaugh, Fargo, N. Ship Operators Fear Loss under Neutrality Law

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Sept. 27. (AP)—Ship operators, fearing a sharp reduction in their business under the pending neutrality resolution, protested sharply today to congressional leaders in charge of that measure.

Their requests for changes in the resolution were met, it was said, with a firm "no" and a statement that the legislation was intended to keep this country out of war, with other considerations secondary.

The congressional leaders further told the shipping people that if, by January, when Congress meets in regular session, the act should appear to be working to their serious disadvantage, legislation could be enacted then for the relief of the shippers.

Big Lines Protest

The protests came, it was said, from the United States lines, from the Dollar Line, from firms operating their own ships to import fruit from South and Central America and the islands of the Caribbean, and from Pan American Airways.

All were concerned about the provision of the law forbidding American ships and aircraft to transport any materials whatsoever to belligerent countries. The application of this provision to the British and French possessions to the south of the United States was of particular concern to the fruit companies and the airline.

The latter, on its passenger route to South America, makes several stops at French and British points. Chairman Pittman (D-Nev) of the Foreign Relations Committee, the author of the resolution, was reliably reported to have said that under the proposed law, Pan-American air liners could continue to stop at these points for refueling, but could discharge neither passengers nor freight.

May Change Bill

While there were some indications that changes might be made on this point when the bill reaches the floor of the Senate, the managers of the bill were refusing all pleas for amendments at this time, for fear of opening the legislation up to general revision.

Some legislators who have always been interested in the American merchant marine were talking today of an arrangement whereby normal trade with Central and South America and the Caribbean would be exempted from the law.

Another development today was a luncheon conference between Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Senator Borah (R-Ida), a leader of the bloc opposing repeal of the present embargo on arms shipments to belligerents.

Lindbergh May Speak

Borah was uncommunicative beyond telling reporters that neutrality legislation and the embargo were under discussion. He intimated that Lindbergh might soon make another radio speech.

Reporters reminded Lindbergh himself that his first radio address, urging strict aloofness for the United States, and the fact that he lunched yesterday with a group favoring repeal of the embargo, had resulted in much speculation as to where he stood on the embargo question. His only reply was:

"Well, it (the speech) is still there to read."

During the day, managers of both sides in the coming Senate controversy over the embargo made arrangements covering the disposition of that issue. It was tentatively decided that the resolution, which includes the proposed repealer, should be reported out when the foreign relations committee meets tomorrow, and be brought before the Senate on Monday.

On that day Pittman is scheduled to open the debate with a speech in behalf of the resolution, with Borah leading off for the opposition Tuesday.

events have impressed on Turkey the "wisdom of perhaps revising her estimate of the value of a British guarantee."

Turks Change Policy

He said an appreciable turn in the Turkish foreign policy, which he termed agreeable to Germany, already had been noted.

He emphasized current military questions involving Russia had been settled with acceptance of the military demarcation line in Poland that Von Ribbentrop's conversations would be largely in the political field with the largest question being the fate of Poland.

There still was no hint whether Russia and Germany were inclined toward the complete elimination of Poland or the establishment of a small Polish buffer state.

It was conceded here that a further German-Russian accord might have repercussions in the far east, with the attitude of Japan still unclarified.

Negotiations in Progress

Meanwhile it was presumed in Berlin that negotiations for the surrender of Warsaw to the encircling German troops were in progress.

A spokesman clarifying the situation said Germany had refrained for a week from assaulting Warsaw and that this restraint apparently was misinterpreted as weakness by the Polish command.

So force was reapplied and after the capture of outward defenses and a thrust toward the central railway station by the Germans, a Polish offer of surrender was received this morning.

"The resistance of Warsaw was completely hopeless and had nothing to do with heroism," a spokesman said.

There was elation in naval circles over the report that German planes had "destroyed" an unnamed British airplane carrier in the middle of the North Sea and had damaged a battleship.

The German high command ridiculed British statements that German aviators had missed their targets and that German planes had been shot down.

Russian proposals." Dispatches received there from Moscow said considerable speculation prevailed in the Russian capital on the possibility that Russia had made strong demands on Estonia for maritime rights.

Holds First Conference

Von Ribbentrop held the first conference of his second historic visit to Moscow tonight with Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff in the Kremlin. It was not disclosed immediately whether Joseph Stalin attended.

The German foreign minister arrived less than five hours earlier, accompanied by Albert Forster, Adolf Hitler's leader in Danzig before the Free City was annexed to Germany.

Three planes bearing his party was greeted by a brass band and an honor guard and Vladimir Potemkin, vice-commissar of foreign affairs, headed the Soviet official welcoming committee. The airport was decorated with inter-twined Russian and Nazi banners.

Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso was the only foreign diplomat who put in an appearance for the welcome.

Three Possibilities

Diplomats said the possibilities of the conference were three-fold; the signing of a German-Soviet military agreement; formation of a new Balkan-near eastern bloc under the guidance of Turkey and Russia; and a joint German-Soviet request that Turkey act as intermediary in attempts to negotiate peace in eastern Europe.

Credence was lent to reports that Japan was playing an important part in the Moscow negotiations when it was learned that Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo conferred last night with Molotoff.

Russia has bitterly criticized Estonia following the escape of the interned Polish submarine Orzel last Monday from Tallinn harbor. The craft was interned after it sought refuge in the Estonian port.

A communique last night said Estonia's explanation of the incident had been "unsatisfactory." It went on to say that "one can arrive at the conclusion that some unknown submarines have a secret base somewhere near the Estonian coast" and added:

"In consequence of these circumstances the question of ensuring the security of Soviet waters agaist diversionist acts on the part of hiding submarines acquires great importance."

The government's announcement of the sinking of the Mettalist said the attack occurred near Narva Bay, on the northern coast of Estonia. Soviet patrol ships were said to have rescued 19 of her crew of 24.

Last night's communique cited reports from Leningrad that "periscopes of unknown submarines" had been sighted near Luga, in the Gulf of Finland near where the Mettalist was said to have been sunk.

A. P. Writer and German Officers Near French Line

privates with whom I talked, said not a single German pillbox had had to return French fire.

The Germans reported that the only fighting, outside of occasional exchanges in the air, that occurs daily is near Zweibruecken. This the Germans call the "vesper blessing" because of its regularity about 6 p. m.

Not Much Harm Done

At that time the sun is at the backs of the French and the German positions are best visible to them. Not much harm is done, however, on either side, the Germans said.

Saarbruecken, an industrial city of 69,000 inhabitants, with valuable steel and iron works, is dead.

Yet the French, so far as I could observe today, make no effort either to seize it — which might cost considerable loss of life because of strong German fortifications surrounding it — or to shell it directly.

Close to French Lines

With our military escorts, I entered the dead city with two other American newsmen in full view of the French. It appeared that had they desired, the French easily could have picked us for easy marks.

The German officers accompanying us made no effort to conceal their uniforms indicating their rank.

Nothing happened.

Walsh Names Harvey Attorney for Fund

Baltimore, Sept. 27. (AP)—Attorney General William C. Walsh announced today the appointment of J. Edgar Harvey of Salisbury as special attorney for the state accident fund, succeeding Albert A. Levin.

Harvey, former president of the Wicomico County Bar Association, will take over his new duties Monday. He will receive $4,000 a year.

Levin was appointed to the post in 1935 by Governor Herbert R. O'Conor, then attorney general. He tendered his resignation last May and asked that it be effective June 1, but Walsh asked that he remain in office until fall. Levin will devote all his time to private practice.

The new assistant is a native of Salisbury and has practiced law in Salisbury since 1929, when he received his degree from the University of Maryland. He is unmarried.

gagement of the war between sea and air forces. On Sept. 5 Britain reported a flight of its planes raided German warships at Kiel, inflicting heavy damage by dive-bombing. The British confessed to casualties during the raid. Some of their fliers were taken prisoner.

British accounts of the latest attack, 150 miles off the Norwegian coast, attributed the failure of the Germans to score hits to their reluctance to dive low in the face of British anti-aircraft fire.

Naval men here asserted it is extremely difficult for aircraft to score hits on ships at sea. They said squadrons could easily carry out zigzag maneuvers and bring into play anti-aircraft guns of such caliber as to make low flying attacks "suicidal."

Much Contraband Seized

The ministry of information announced that 255,000 tons of contraband, chiefly iron ore and petroleum products, had been seized since the beginning of the war, including more than 70,000 tons taken during the week ended yesterday.

Churchill also told Commons that the $20,000,000 German liner Bremen, unreported since sailing from New York Aug. 30, was "believed to be in a North Russian port." Earlier the Bremen had been reported to have reached Murmansk, Soviet Arctic port.

Bergdoll Says He Hid in America For Seven Years

Draft Dodger Tells Surprising Story at His Trial

New York, Sept. 27 (AP)—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll calmly informed a general court martial today that during seven of the nineteen years he was supposedly a fugitive in Germany he was actually living in his mother's home in Philadelphia.

Moreover, the World war's "No. 1 draft dodger" swore he had recovered the $105,000 in gold which he told army authorities in 1920 he had buried in a Maryland hillside. Actually, Bergdoll testified, the money was hidden in a closet in his mother's home.

Mrs. Emma Bergdoll, his aged mother, corroborated his testimony at his trial for desertion and escape and added, under the questioning of the civilian defense counsel, Harry Weinberger, that she had invested much of the money, perhaps $90,000, in Liberty bonds.

His pretty blonde German-born wife, Berta, also corroborated her husband's testimony.

Bergdoll, now grown plump and middle-aged, said he visited the United States twice during the period of his self-imposed exile, staying four years the first time, and three years the second, but never venturing from the Bergdoll "castle" in Wynnefield avenue, Philadelphia.

As artfully as he dodged the military authorities, he dodged the immigration laws, he disclosed. The first time he came home was in 1929, Bergdoll said. He traveled on a passport, issued to J. Amman, a German hotel porter; the second time under the name of John Sparks.

Weinberger put Bergdoll on the stand to combat the army's contention that the statute of limitations was still in force since the time spent out of the jurisdiction of the army doesn't count. The statute of limitations, Weinberger said, was two years.

Before Bergdoll testified, the army prosecutor, Maj. Archer Lerch, called Eugene (Ike) Stecher, former Bergdoll family chauffeur, who fled with Bergdoll to Germany and remained there five years; and Tecnical Sergeant Frank Zimmer, who identified Bergdoll as the man he tried to arrest in Eberbach, Germany, in 1921.

The government hoped in this way to establish a prima facie case of Bergdoll's long residence in Germany; and even produced a passport application made on Oct. 1, 1934, in which he swore he had lived in Germany since 1920.

Weinberger's move, therefore, was something of a surprise.

Bergdoll, dressed in the dark brown uniform of a general military prisoner, watched the proceedings with apparent indifference. The air in the makeshift courtroom in the gymnasium of the Y.M.C.A., on Governors Island was chilly, the spectators few.

From this same island he had set out under guard on May 20, 1920, following his conviction as a draft evader, to recover the "pot of gold" he insisted he had buried in Western Maryland. He escaped during the trip.

He is serving five years as a draft evader, since his voluntary return from Germany and voluntary surrender, last May, and he may get five years more on conviction of escape and desertion.

Jefferson Guilty of Brutal Murder of Frances Dunn

verdict was impossible because premeditation had not been proven.

The 29-year-old prisoner, appearing as the sole defense witness, readily admitted clubbing and stabbing the pretty, brunette dramatics student the day after he lured her and Jean Bolton from their Miami homes with promises of a chance in the movies.

Denies Criminal Assault

But he denied rape preceded the killing and said he struck only after Miss Dunn and Miss Bolton had quarreled bitterly about aiding him in carrying out a kidnaping hoax for publicity purposes.

The tall defendant also insisted Miss Bolton stood by while he struck down her schoolmate, contradicting the blonde night club singer's testimony that she sat terror stricken in Jefferson's car while he raped and killed Miss Dunn some distance away in a thicket.

Jefferson said after he had driven the girls to a lonely beach road north of Miami early last August, he announced to them they were being kidnaped and Jean suggested such an abduction might prove good nationwide publicity for a coming movie career.

But Miss Dunn refused to join in such a hoax, he said, and while she and Jean quarreled he struck down Frances with a hammer, then got his gun from the car and fired once at her, apparently missing.

Knew She Was Dying

"Frances fell back, just sitting, leaning on her hands," he continued. "She started jerking. I'd never seen anybody die before, but I knew she was dying."

He said the jerking continued and he stabbed his victim before she died.

He was asked whether Miss Bolton had anything to do with the killing.

"No. Nothing whatever. She just stood there with her hands over her face.

When asked why he hit his victim, he replied in a bare whisper, "I wish I knew."

Communists Raise Millions in U. S. for Russia, Witness Says

Washington, Sept. 27. (AP)—Dr. David H. Dubrowsky, who formerly represented the Russian Red Cross in the United States, estimated before the Dies committee today that Americans and their government were contributing $17,500,000 a year to the coffers of the Soviet Union.

This sum, Chairman Dies (D-Tex) said, was more than sufficient to finance what he referred to as "Communist espionage and sabotage activities" in this country.

Such activities, Dubrowsky testified in Russian-accented English, included the theft of United States mail by Russian secret police agents and plots to intercept cables and telegrams through minor employes of communications companies.

Dubrowsky said he felt qualified to make the estimates because of 16 years close association with the Moscow government and its subsidiary agencies, adding that his figure did not include money contributed to Russia by the American Communist party and "Communist front" organizations in this country.

His total included:

$8,000,000 in "duties" and "licenses" on food and clothing sent by Americans to the needy in Russia.

$5,000,000 from Russian motion pictures distributed in this country.

$2,400,000 from Bookniga, Russian book distributing agency in this country.

$1,200,000 from Inreklama, an agency which he said operated a "kick back racket" by soliciting Russian newspaper advertising from concerns which sell to the Soviet's Amtorg Trading Corporation.

$500,000 from Iniurcollegia, an agency which collects estate and insurance money from Russian claimants and which Dubrowsky said kept most of it for governmental purpose.

$400,000 from the U. S. Veterans Administration in pensions and benefits made out to residents of Russia. Most of this total, the witness declared, was intercepted by the Russian government and used for propaganda and other activities in the United States.

Hitler Plans To Use Troops for Peace Drive Club

eign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, to Moscow today ostensibly to put the finishing touches on the partition of Poland.

Actually von Ribbentrop was reported in Paris to be trying to persuade Joseph Stalin to sign or at least give the impression that he is willing to sign a military alliance which Germany could use as a threat against the French and British unless they were willing to call off the war on his terms.

It was for the same reason that Hitler was believed to have issued urgent orders to his high command to clear up Poland quickly so there would be no semblance of resistance left there to which France and Britain could point.

Trains were said to be moving in a steady stream across Germany, pouring more and more troops into the Siegrried fortifications. Squadron after squadron of warplanes were reported shifted to the west.

Armies Not in Action

It was obvious, however, the Germans on the western front had made no real use of the forces concentrated there.

The reason was considered to be that the Germans did not want large-scale operations to start against France and Britain for fear of endangering any chances for peace.

Until now the Nazis have appeared content to take the usual measures to defend their fortress line and hamper the French advance into German territory as much as possible without joining a battle which would be difficult to break off.

Operations on the western front tonight provided an illustration of this apparent German strategy.

German artillery was concentrating its fire on the four main salients which the French have driven into Nazi territory.

Hold Troops in Leash

At the same time, the German tactics appeared to be to try to keep the French high command constantly aware of the immense German forces being held on leash.

The heaviest fire from the German guns battered the area behind the Lauter river, across which the French hold a wedged salient in Bienwald forest.

The Germans used long-range field pieces to hurl big shells across the river into deserted towns as deep as four miles back in French territory.

Nazi shells ripped holes in the strategic French highway from Hagenau northwest to Wissembourg on the western edges of the Bienwald.

Except for intermittent shelling the Saarbruecken sector, where the French salient lies east of the city, remained quiet.

A heavier artillery duel was resumed 25 miles farther west where the French lines bend almost to the banks of the Saar river between the German cities of Merzig and Saarlouis.

The first nip of cold weather hit the western front today. Paris hospitals and relief organizations received urgent calls for doctors, ambulances and warm clothing to be distributed to civilians still in the zone just behind the front.

Britain Increases Tax Rate To Raise Cash for the War

Incomes Will Be Taxed 35 Per Cent until Next March 31

By HUGH WAGNON

London, Sept. 27 (AP) — Britain marshaled today her great army of taxpayers, rich and poor alike, to bear the heaviest tax burden ever undertaken by the nation to finance the war against Germany.

Seeking to meet an estimated £2,000,000,000 ($8,000,000,000 — correct) outlay in the current fiscal year, greatly increased by the costs of war, the budget presented to the House of Commons called for a 35 percent standard tax on income until next March 31, when the fiscal year ends.

For 1940-41 the rate will rise to 37.5 percent; until today it was 27.5 percent.

The burden on the poor was increased by lowering the exemption marks at which taxation begins.

Foreigners Taxed

Foreigners resident in Britain must pay at the same rate as British subjects.

The average Briton gasped at unexpectedly drastic increases on income, beer, sugar, wine, tobacco, whisky, estates, surtaxes and excess profits, but the news shared proud front-page headlines asserting the home fleet had scored against German warplanes in a sea engagement.

"If the price of victory be high, it is a price worth paying," Sir John Simon, tall, gaunt chancellor of the exchequer, told a cheering House of Commons as he presented the war budget.

"It is the price of our liberty and all that makes life worth living in Europe and for ourselves."

Londoners hailed the budget as the best possible proof of the nation's determination to carry out a supreme war effort.

More welcome, though, was First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill's announcement that a squadron of British capital ships, destroyers and aircraft carriers repulsed an attack by 20 German aircraft in the North Sea yesterday.

United States Marine Says He Robbed To Get Out of Trouble

Baltimore, Sept. 17 (AP) — Wilbur Russell Davis, 20-year-old United States Marine whose superior testified his service for the past three years had been excellent, was sentenced to five years in the federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., today for a $2,500 holdup of the Annapolis Bank and Trust Company Aug. 9.

The marine's side of it, as he testified in court, was brief:

"I had been in financial trouble and wanted to get out of it."

In court, and weeping as federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut passed sentence, was the marine's young wife. Two weeks before the hold-up, testimony disclosed, she had filed suit for divorce. Part of the loot, it was testified, had been given her. Davis explaining that it was an inheritance.

Major Emery E. Larson, navy football coach and Davis' superior officer, testified that the young marine's record was excellent. Davis, who said he was from Shreveport, La., had been assigned to the marine detail at the naval academy.

Officers said $1,929 was recovered.

Davis pleaded guilty, and prosecution testimony was brief.

W. E. Wiley, bank teller, said Davis appeared at his window and pushed across a bag and a note reading:

"This is a stickup. Put $2,500 in the bag or I'll blow the place up."

One of Davis' hands, Wiley said, was wrapped in a handkerchief.

Given the money, Davis fled on foot, jumping several fences and escaping in a chase with police. He was arrested several days later by federal bureau of investigation agents, who entered the case because the bank was insured under the Federal Isurance Act.

Boston Gets Convention

The 1940 convention was awarded to Boston while the delegates cleared the decks for a final business session and the election of officers tomorrow.

The candidates for national commander are Raymond J. Kelly, Detroit, Mich., Jack Crowley, Rutland, Vt. Ray Fields, Guthrie, Okla., Edward Scheiberling, Albany, N. Y., Lynn Stambaugh, Fargo, N. D., and Milo Warner Toledo, Ohio. The corporation counsel in the latter city, was regarded by many members as the favorite.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor urged the Legionnaires that workers be opposed to American involvement in European conflicts, and relied on the Congress to keep the nation at peace.

Developments abroad, he said, "make it imperative to build a national defense that will be invincible."

Hugh S. Johnson declared that to ensure "international decency" he added:

"Now look at things."

Now It Is "Credit and Carry"

THIS NEWSPAPER, as well as other newspapers, has heretofore protested against the so-called cash and carry plan the Roosevelt administration wanted to put into the neutrality act. It has been pointed out that the administration bill introduced last May for this provision was not a mandatory provision and that it left discretion with the president.

The administration neutrality bill introduced last spring provided for credits and renewals thereof in the payment for arms and munitions purchased here by belligerents and hauled away in their own ships, and the new bill tightens that somewhat by limiting the credits to ninety days without privilege of renewal, which privilege the earlier bill allowed. But the administration forces latterly had given the impression, or at least it was given in press reports not denied, that the administration had changed to a strict cash and carry plan. It was repeatedly so designated. Perhaps it was believed that sounded better for public consumption.

It seems that such protests were well grounded for now the administration bill placed before the Senate Foreign Relations committee for lifting the embargoes returns from the cash and carry idea to one of credit and carry; and likewise gives the president the right to proclaim "combat areas" in his discretion.

Both these provisions should by all means be changed, if we are to have a neutrality act that is actually a neutrality act. The executive discretion should be removed. The executive already has too many prerogatives in connection with the war situation, and there is good reason for apprehensions over his unpredictable use of them.

As for the credit provision, that, too, seems foolish for the simple reason that it means eventually our paying for the costly war now raging abroad and goodness knows we have had enough of footing the bills for that destructive game, from which before we got nothing save the name of Shylock and years of terrible depression after the war boom collapsed.

The provision giving presidential authority to define and proclaim combat areas is particularly objectionable by reason of its blanket scope. It not only rests the authority for that "whenever . . . he shall find that protection of citizens of the United States so requires . . ." but also provides that "the president may from time to time modify or extend any proclamation issued under the authority of this section . . ." Undesirable and undue authority is provided in the credit and carry section. The bill carries the proviso that "if the president shall find that such action will serve to protect the commercial or other interests of the United States or its citizens, he may, in his discretion, and to such extent and under such regulations as he may prescribe, except from the operation of this section, for a period of not more than ninety days without renewals, ordinary commercial credits and short-time obligations in aid of legal transactions and of a character customarily used in normal peacetime commercial transactions . . ." The italics are ours.

Senators at Washington should beware of the administration's power grabbing propensities. They should know by this time that once the administrationists get hold of a shoestring it is not long until they take not only the whole shoe factory but all the shoe factories in the surrounding counties. If there is anything on which we should be cautious and prudent in regard to the war situation it is this neutrality act. The people not only do not want to engage in this war but, they want tightly closed all loopholes through which we might slip into it.

Might Copy Maryland

OVER IN WEST VIRGINIA, its state police are now engaged in stopping automobiles along the roads for the purpose of making inspections.

When the cars are found to be in safe condition and in full compliance with the road laws of the state, an official certificate of inspection and approval is issued to the motorist, which prevents the annoyance of repeated inspections. Where cars are found to be unsafe or to lack some required part or equipment, a written notice is given the driver and it is a violation of the law for him to continue operation of the vehicle until the necessary repairs or adjustments are made.

The inspection idea is excellent, but the method of doing it along the roadside seems inconvenient and a hindrance to traffic. In fact, it is being protested on that account. The Morgantown Post, for example, suggests that the motorists be allowed to take their cars to state police posts at convenient times for inspection. This, it says, would save them the delay as well as the annoyance and inconvenience of being stopped along the road.

West Virginia might solve this problem by doing as Maryland does, which is to have the inspection done at the garages where motorists take their cars at any time convenient for them prior to the date on which certificates of approval becomes effective.

The Sensible Course

AMERICAN LEGIONNAIRES, who have been having their annual national convention in Chicago, can be counted upon as a powerful factor in opposition to intervention by the United States in the European war. Equally so can the other veterans' organizations coming out of the World war.

One big reason for this, though not, of course, the whole reason, is that the most of these veterans have sons who are now of draft age; and that makes a tremendous difference. But they also bear the mental as well as the physical scars of that hellish holacaust and if anybody can realize and appreciate the horrors of warfare they certainly can.

Two strong addresses at the Legion convention developed the thought that a strong, neutral America, preserving the ideals of democracy at home, can do more to influence the world for good than can a fighting America actively participating in the present war.

The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopalian bishop of Washington, D. C., declaring that "some part of this earth must be kept free from the bloody shambles of war," made an impressive point regarding American neutrality. "It is not a cowardly course," he said, "nor one governed by selfish interests. We failed in the last war to make the world safe for democracy, and we failed to establish the peace of Europe. What happened at Versailles undid what was done in prodigal sacrifice on the battlefields of France. We are still paying the price and shall continue to pay for generations to come."

The other address, by Stephen F. Chadwick, national commander of the Legion, stressed the wiser example for America's part in the present war situation. "Rather than armed assault," Chadwick said, "it is sometimes better for the people of a nation that they have available to them the example of a nation that has progressed and found peace and prosperity as a free nation, than that an attempt be made by sword and bayonet and bomb and gas to impose by force our ideals upon them."

Indeed, viewed from every angle, it would appear that the sensible course for this nation to pursue is that of complete neutrality with careful attention to the safeguarding of the principles of popular government here at home.

The Russian Shadow

ADDING to the mystery in which Soviet Russia is shrouded is the visit of Von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, in Moscow for some sort of conference, the nature of which has not been disclosed. While there is some conjecture about a military pact, nobody knows what Stalin is up to, but in the light of recent events it is probable that Hitler is much more worried over the situation than is Stalin. In fact, the shadow of Russia looming over eastern Germany and the Balkans looks pretty dark for the Hitlerites.

Stalin sent his armies into Poland after Hitler had done most of the dirty work and grabbed the rich agricultural region of the Polish Ukraine. That was not so good for Hitler, who seriously lacks food and food sources, though having much industrial wealth. Even before the division of the Polish spoils, in which Russia got the lion's share of a bargain Hitler was in no position to protest, Stalin sent his troops hotfoot across Poland and occupied the entire Polish-Roumanian border.

Hitler has long looked wistfully upon Roumania's wheat fields and valuable oil resources, which he has needed badly. Now Russia has shut him off from them unless he goes through Hungary after it, and Stalin was selfishly shrewd enough to grab nearly of the Polish-Hungarian border, where he is in a good position to strike at Hitler if Hitler makes a move in that direction.

Thus Stalin appears to have thwarted Hitler's designs on the Balkans and has assumed an imperialistic attitude which sooner or later forecasts a clash with Germany. It is no wonder, then, that the question has arisen whether Hitler has not been flimflammed by Comrade Stalin at his own game.

Switzerland's mobilization is costing that country $1,000,000 a day, according to a cabled dispatch. Even at that price it's a bargain — compared to actual war.

The French warrior, Weygand, finds the Turks still on the fence. Only an American politician of ripe experience could sit like a Turk, on a fence.

In Europe works of art are now being stored in bomb-proof metal shelters. Like everything else, we now get our masterpieces in tin cans.

The United States certainly is the land of overbundance. In Europe there is no Thanksgiving day while we have one too many.

America is the land of opportunity where everyone gets a second chance to make good—everyone, except a football coach.

Finland, we read, has not given up her plans to stage the Olympic games there in 1940. That is, of course, if there is a Finland.

The Bremen is as hard to find as the envelope containing President Roosevelt's predictions on the 1938 elections.

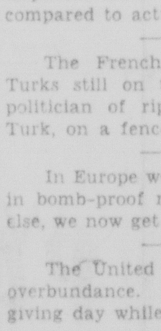
The Gulf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

There is a gulf in every human being between what he knows and what he does.

If he is happy, the gulf is no wider than a small ditch and he can jump across it.

If he is unhappy, it is wider than the Grand Canyon, wider than the ocean, and he stands on its brink, shades his eyes, and stares mournfully across its vasty deeps.



Marshall Maslin

And wonders, self-torturing and self-complaining, why he fails so miserably to achieve his heart's desires.

He would be strong, he would be kind, he would be brave. He would be thoughtful and self-constrained and less ill-tempered. . . . Why does he fail so often and so completely?

He knows better. Always he knows better. He sees the right thing to do. It shines before him like the mid-day sun. It welcomes, entreats him, promises him. Then why can't he always do it? Why does that demon of perversity, of pride, of weakness, sit at the center of him and direct him wrongly, so heartbreakingly lead him astray?

Almost any man (or woman) ought to know better than this, ought to be strong enough to do as he KNOWS best. . . . Then what is the name of that demon that drives him away from his deeper wisdom? If only he could name it, then he might be able to challenge it and conquer it.

Is is Self-Pity, perhaps? Is is Cowardice? Is it Stupidity? Is it some untamed savagery out of the ungovernable past? Is it a wild Egotism that refuses to be bound by even the best of laws?

It is a mystery, but some men fight their way through to its solution, span the great gulf and win happiness for themselves. But other men fail to narrow the space between what they know and what they do, moan fitfully forever on the brink, weep bitter tears, wave their arms wildly, grope remorsefully or self-accusingly through the hard remnants of their lives.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Sheriff Maurice A. Fitzgerald of Queens County, N. Y., recruits 1,200 deputies to keep his borough neutral and to hunt spies and saboteurs. Such vigilance is to be commended, considering our laxity and the price we paid for it in the period preceding our entry in the World war. But we aren't in any war yet, and there is reassurance in Mr. Fitzgerald's statement that there won't be any witch-hunting.

Edwin C. Hill

Spy hysteria is one of the least pleasant accompaniments of war tension. Just a jumpy light-socket near your bedroom window and an over-zealous neighbor may be turning you in to the John Laws for signalling to some accomplice in disloyalty. Then there is to be considered the opportunity which unscrupulous persons have for venting hatred and grudges under conditions of war psychology, or its incipient peace-time prevalence.

It seems to me that the president's salutary injunction to keep neutral might well carry an admonition not to suspect and persecute our neighbors just because we don't like them. Mr. Fitzgerald says his anti-spy legion is made of doctors, lawyers, professors and other professional men who can be depended upon for good sense and caution in turning in suspects. That is, of course, as it should be.

Highly Professionalized

Counter-espionage is a highly professionalized job which, happily, has been turned over to the superlatively efficient Federal Bureau of Investigation. A current news story from Washington reveals that more than a year ago Mr. Hoover's G-men were indentured for intensive training in spotting wreckers, spies and subversive activity in general.

There is satisfaction in the news that these preparations have been made and are being carried on at a time when it can be done without recourse to extra-legal devices. The liberties and safety of honest citizens are in less jeopardy under skilled and official scrutiny such as this than under the free-for-all of amateur spy-chasing.

Furthermore the G-men can do a much better job of getting at the real criminals than all the rest of us put together. They not only have the benefit of their specialized training, but they work in an organization which has been going for years, and which has the number of just about every trouble-breeder in the country.

I'm for the utmost vigilance, but I believe that one way to keep out of war is to pipe down on detective story thrills and romantic excitements, keep our shirts on and let the professionals attend to all this, in their own quiet way.

A Standing Joke

The amateur detective is a standing joke in our country—the lad who takes a correspondence course in trailing evildoers, gets a diploma and a tin badge and starts out on the trail. That has been a considerable ingredient of a lot of our hay-loft reading, and the urge has been by no means lessened by the pulp magazine fiction with which millions of our citizenry, principally youthful, have been fed.

After there had been about $30,000,000 worth of damage in the era just preceding our entry into the World war, we did a hurry-up job of recruiting intelligence services, military, civil and quasiofficial. Many of the zealous young counter-espionage agents were cast in the above romantic pattern. While it all came out all right in the end, we would have done a lot better had we known some of the facts of life and set up a workmanlike organization like the FBI.

We learned something. There is no question but that in the years in between wars we have vastly improved our protective intelligence work, and we have set it apart as a highly specialized detail of national policing, which it should be.

Much Better Now

The Army Intelligence Service, I am told by an army friend, is incomparably better than it was in the last war. As I see it, it is important, in all our consideration of spying and sabotage, to remember that we are not in the war, that we are neutral and that we intend to keep out of war. In this light it is clear that effective counter-espionage is a superb bulwark for peace. With slackness in this field, a few bridges blown up, another Black Tom explosion, time-bombs sinking ships—all this would fan up the war fever faster than anything you can think of.

Catching the spies and saboteurs before they do their stuff certainly will help a lot in keeping us out of war—and that is our main idea just now.—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

ENVOY FROM CANADA

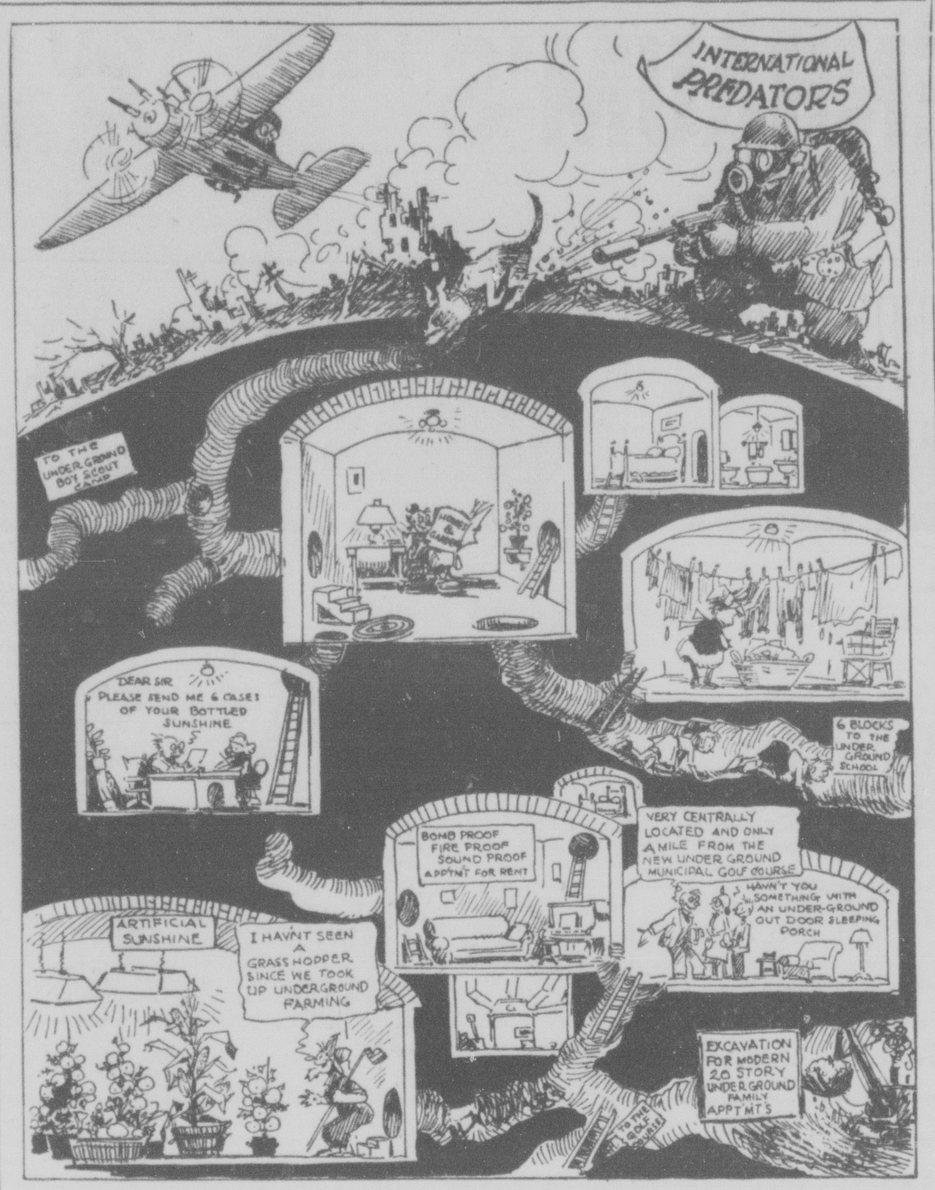
The newly arrived minister from Canada, Loring C. Christie, calls at the White House in Washington to present his credientials to President Roosevelt. They exchanged pledges of continued friendship between the United States and Canada.

"THE WORLD OF TOMORROW"



German People, Though Now Muzzled, Really Wish To Return to Democracy

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Is Germany pro-Hitler? Would Adolf win in an honestly conducted election? Nobody can tell, of course. But I have some family connections in the Fatherland, and I've tried to find out from them, personally. If they're there at this time, naturally they don't tell. But I've seen several of them on visits to this country. Since they've intended to go back, it goes without saying that they've expressed themselves only in the faintest whispers.

Charles P. Stewart

Wants To Get Back

With the war on, the Germans want to win. At this juncture they wouldn't dump Der Fuehrer. In the long run, however, the German bulk appears to be anti-Nazistic. It wants to get back, ultimately, to democracy. It harks into a past when young Germans immigrated into the United States to escape universal military conscription.

Some of our best liberals, like Senator Carl Schurz, were of that era. And some of our rip-snorting radicals, like Governor John Peter Altgeld, of Illinois. But even Altgeld wasn't a Nazi; he was an exaggerated Democrat.

The dope I get is that today's Germany is the old-time article. It's muzzled, but only temporarily.

In the last war we had a censorship.

Said Robbie Burns of censorship:

"Here's freedom for him who would read.
"Here's freedom who would write.
"There's none ever feared that the truth should be heard.
"Save them that the truth would indict."

Let 'em fulminate, I'd say. Let 'em indict 'emselves.

Third Term Question

In a recent column I indicated my belief that present conditions hint at a third term for President Roosevelt. One of my readers, out in Iowa, replies:

"How can it be argued that in America we should abolish essential traditions merely because of war, hysterical war sentiment or because the president, at the time, happens to be obligated by his offices and authority to protect America, so far as possible, from becoming involved in war?"

Especially what my correspondent (R. F. Clough of Mason City, Ia.) is afraid of is a third Rooseveltian term. Far be it from me to boost for a third presidential term.

But I do think that a third term is hinted at by the present war situation.

Overwhelming Sentiment

"I see no reason," says my correspondent, "for adjournment of what I believe to be the overwhelming sentiment of the American people against a third term for Mr. Roosevelt or any other president of the United States.

"I should hope that newspaper writers would think this thing through and not lend themselves to the type of political propaganda indicated by the conclusion of your article"—which was to the effect that our tendency is warward.

Mine isn't, believe me. I'm a pacifist. I was so considered in the last war. But not this time. I'm anti-Hitler.

Maryland Farm Musings

From the Extension Service of the University of Maryland.

A number of conservation practices have been revised in the 1940 farm program to promote conservation of wildlife.

It is estimated that in addition to the 2,775 farmers in Maryland who reported bees in the 1930 census, 1,974 non-farmers also kept bees, according to a bulletin just issued by the University of Maryland Experiment Station. Copies of this bulletin, No. 427, may be obtained by writing to the experiment station at College Park. The title is "The Production and Marketing of Honey in Maryland."

* * *

The fact that Maryland soils are among the oldest in this country from the standpoint of length of time in cultivation, and at the same time the yields of our principal crops are among the highest, pays a tribute to those who have tilled these lands that cannot be expressed in words.

Soybeans are being used in large quantities in the manufacture of various articles, and they can be grown successfully in Maryland. While agricultural outlook statements issued recently have not encouraged substantial expansion in soybean production for commercial use in the immediate future, it is a situation with which farmers may well keep in touch. It is one of the problems to be studied by the new laboratory established near Philadelphia to endeavor to find new uses for farm products.

Information obtained from Maryland beekeepers, obtained through personal interviews and the use of questionnaires, is presented in a new bulletin just issued by the University of Maryland Experiment Station. The title of this bulletin is "The Production and Marketing of Honey in Maryland," and the authors are R. F. Burdette and Dr. S. H. DeVault.

Beware of Propaganda

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer.

Now that the first exciting days of the European war are over and the forces of France and England and Germany and Poland settle down to the grim business of extermination, the American people have time to pause and take stock of their own position.

To the thoughtful mind it becomes constantly clearer that our chief concern should be the preservation of a strict neutrality. There are two compelling reasons for this:

To begin with, enlightened self-interest should caution us to keep clear of the conflict. We have nothing to win by hurling ourselves into it—unless we accept once again the far-fetched premise that democracy is at stake—and a great deal to lose. It is unnecessary to recount the horrors and futility and crushing cost of war. We all are familiar with them. We went through the experience once before within the memory of most adults now living. We know what it would mean to go to war again.

Then, there is the broader ground of world relations to consider. In this day of international madness, there must be some calm spot in the World. There must be a great power in position to bind up the wounds; to take the initiative in a movement for peace; to act as arbitrator when the contestants have fought to exhaustion. What Nation other than the United States is in position to do that? And how can we maintain this position save through a policy of neutrality?

Such a policy is not isolation. It is the most effective sort of international cooperation.

If we are to exercise this influence, however, we must be prepared to resist all sorts of pressures to force us into war. Even before the firing began, the forces of propaganda were at work. Our natural sympathies were worked on. The impending conflict was represented as one in which our very concept of government was at stake. A studied effort was made to implant fear into our minds that unless we got into the struggle our own shores would be invaded next.

We may look for a steadily intensified campaign of this sort as time goes on. There will be an appeal particularly to the American people to loan money for war purposes; to sell war supplies on credit; to cut the corners of neutrality in a hundred ways. If we succumb to this campaign we will assemble another batch of uncollectable war debts to store away with the last ones, and sooner or later will figure in an "incident" which will be the excuse for our entry. In short, it will be the World war all over again, with all of the evils accentuated.

If, on the other hand, we stand firm; if we keep on sawing wood; if we keep our own national interest foremost in our thoughts; if we maintain a rigid neutrality against all the pressure to deviate, we will profit as a Nation and be in a position to serve the cause of peace when the firing ceases.

Canada Gives Us A War Sample

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Chicago, Sept. 27—Canada to[day] is a good preview of what may ha[p]pen to a great American, An[glo]-Saxon democracy when it goes [to] war. It's democracy in abandon. It has barely sampled war, [the] Magna Carta is already in the [dis]can and the Bill of Rights is [out] the window.

Freedom of speech, press and [ra]dio is gone. Canadians aren't [even] to bother with elections—so [re]sentative government is gone. [Man]ufacture and selling are being [done] under a license system. Taxes [are] automatically zooming—so [property] rights and liberty of contract [are] going. The government is [getting] ready to regulate practically all [eco]nomic relations by dictatorial [de]cree. The appalling total of all [this] seems to make Hitler a piker and Mussolini a maundering monk.

It is too silly. Like us, Canada [is] 3,000 miles from the battle [line]. She is as yet not even fragmentarily engaged. We learned how to [mo]bilize a nation for war in 1918. [We] did as good a job as any. But [we] didn't do it by scrapping every principle for which this country stands, at the very outset. Reference to the necessity for unity in [war] Woodrow Wilson said that a [war] "highest and best," it is the [spon]taneous cooperation of a free people."

Grudging Surrender

We did the job but we gave [it] grudgingly to every threatened [in]vasion of the constitutional rights of our people. We treated concessions to autocracy on the principle of the right to kill in self-defense as much as was absolutely necessary and not one whit more. We engaged in no sheep-like stampede to give up our guts at the first gun-fire. Let's not let any of this European passion for regimentation spread to us by way of Canada now. If we are not much farther than Canada from necessity for some kind of panicky surrender to dictatorial ballyhoo, somebody is going like hell.

And yet Canada has laid the [ter]ror in Europe on our very doorstep. She is going across the Atlantic ocean to fight Hitler. Canada is a sovereign nation. She hasn't threatened any more than we have—which is not at all. If she is not an "aggressor," what is she?

No Engagement

And where do we stand? If the enemy she has chosen to attack in Europe counter-attacks her, hasn't our president said that we would not "stand idly by"? That may not spell an "offensive-defensive" alliance but, from the point of our interests, isn't it something much worse? We haven't any engagement from Canada to defend us, but this sounds like our engagement to defend her, no matter what her fault may be. The Monroe Doctrine requires no such absurdity.

Did Canada consult us about course of war that might bring us in, regardless of our rights or interest? Our people have not heard about it, if she did. But is it conceivable that she would go to war in these circumstances without consulting our government? If she did, what was the answer?

Whose Decision?

Who makes the decisions that raise our obligation to fight? Was Canada or the British Empire some impulsive promise of the president? Or anything at all? Did the Congress, of the United States representing the will of a majority of 130,000,000 people, see that we do not remain careful, cautious and alert, it may be.

The greatest applause the president got in his last message or address to the Congress came when he said that he did not now seek any new emergency powers, Thank God for that! All we need to do now is look to Canada to know what "emergency powers" mean. They mean that to "save democracy" we ditch democracy. Let's keep our shirts on and our fingers crossed. There are too many influential underlings in Washington who don't give a damn for democracy.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Now It Is "Credit and Carry"

THIS NEWSPAPER, as well as other newspapers, has heretofore protested against the so-called cash and carry plan the Roosevelt administration wanted to put into the neutrality act. It has been pointed out that the administration bill introduced last May for this provision was not a mandatory provision and that it left discretion with the president.

The administration neutrality bill introduced last spring provided for credits and renewals thereof in the payment for arms and munitions purchased here by belligerents and hauled away in their own ships, and the new bill tightens that somewhat by limiting the credits to ninety days without privilege of renewal, which privilege the earlier bill allowed. But the administration forces latterly had given the impression, or at least it was given in press reports not denied, that the administration had changed to a strict cash and carry plan. It was repeatedly so designated. Perhaps it was believed that sounded better for public consumption.

It seems that such protests were well grounded for now the administration bill placed before the Senate Foreign Relations committee for lifting the embargoes returns from the cash and carry idea to one of credit and carry; and likewise gives the president the right to proclaim "combat areas" in his discretion.

Both these provisions should by all means be changed, if we are to have a neutrality act that is actually a neutrality act. The executive discretion should be removed. The executive already has too many prerogatives in connection with the war situation, and there is good reason for apprehensions over his unpredictable use of them.

As for the credit provision, that, too, seems foolish for the simple reason that it means eventually our paying for the costly war now raging abroad and goodness knows we have had enough of footing the bills for that destructive game, from which before we got nothing save the name of Shylock and years of terrible depression after the war boom collapsed.

The provision giving presidential authority to define and proclaim combat areas is particularly objectionable by reason of its blanket scope. It not only rests the authority for that "whenever . . . he shall find that protection of citizens of the United States so requires . . ." but also provides that "the president may from time to time modify or extend any proclamation issued under the authority of this section . . ."

Undesirable and undue authority is provided in the credit and carry section. The bill carries the proviso that "if the president shall find that such action will serve to protect the commercial or other interests of the United States or its citizens, he may, in his discretion, and to such extent and under such regulations as he may prescribe, except from the operation of this section, for a period of not more than ninety days without renewals, ordinary commercial credits and short-time obligations in aid of legal transactions and of a character customarily used in normal peacetime commercial transactions . . ." The italics are ours.

Senators at Washington should beware of the administration's power grabbing propensities. They should know by this time that once the administrationists get hold of a shoestring it is not long until they take not only the whole shoe factory but all the shoe factories in the surrounding counties. If there is anything on which we should be cautious and prudent in regard to the war situation it is this neutrality act. The people not only do not want to engage in this war but, they want tightly closed all loopholes through which we might slip into it.

Might Copy Maryland

OVER IN WEST VIRGINIA, its state police are now engaged in stopping automobiles along the roads for the purpose of making inspections.

When the cars are found to be in safe condition and in full compliance with the road laws of the state, an official certificate of inspection and approval is issued to the motorist, which prevents the annoyance of repeated inspections. Where cars are found to be unsafe or to lack some required part or equipment, a written notice is given the driver and it is a violation of the law for him to continue operation of the vehicle until the necessary repairs or adjustments are made.

The inspection idea is excellent, but the method of doing it along the roadside seems inconvenient and a hindrance to traffic. In fact, it is being protested on that account. The Morgantown Post, for example, suggests that the motorists be allowed to take their cars to state police posts at convenient times for inspection. This, it says, would save them the delay as well as the annoyance and inconvenience of being stopped along the road.

West Virginia might solve this problem by doing as Maryland does, which is to have the inspection done at the garages where motorists take their cars at any time convenient for them prior to the date on which certificates of approval becomes effective.

The Sensible Course

AMERICAN LEGIONNAIRES, who have been having their annual national convention in Chicago, can be counted upon as a powerful factor in opposition to intervention by the United States in the European war. Equally so can the other veterans' organizations coming out of the World war.

One big reason for this, though not, of course, the whole reason, is that the most of these veterans have sons who are now of draft age; and that makes a tremendous difference. But they also bear the mental as well as the physical scars of that hellish holacaust and if anybody can realize and appreciate the horrors of warfare they certainly can.

Two strong addresses at the Legion convention developed the thought that a strong, neutral America, preserving the ideals of democracy at home, can do more to influence the world for good than can a fighting America actively participating in the present war.

The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopalian bishop of Washington, D. C., declaring that "some part of this earth must be kept free from the bloody shambles of war," made an impressive point regarding American neutrality. "It is not a cowardly course," he said, "nor one governed by selfish interests. We failed in the last war to make the world safe for democracy, and we failed to establish the peace of Europe. What happened at Versailles undid what was done in prodigal sacrifice on the battlefields of France. We are still paying the price and shall continue to pay for generations to come."

The other address, by Stephen F. Chadwick, national commander of the Legion, stressed the wiser example for America's part in the present war situation. "Rather than armed assault," Chadwick said, "it is sometimes better for the people of a nation that they have available to them the example of a nation that has progressed and found peace and prosperity as a free nation, than that an attempt be made by sword and bayonet and bomb and gas to impose by force our ideals upon them."

Indeed, viewed from every angle, it would appear that the sensible course for this nation to pursue is that of complete neutrality with careful attention to the safeguarding of the principles of popular government here at home.

The Russian Shadow

ADDING to the mystery in which Soviet Russia is shrouded is the visit of Von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, in Moscow for some sort of conference, the nature of which has not been disclosed. While there is some conjecture about a military pact, nobody knows what Stalin is up to, but in the light of recent events it is probable that Hitler is much more worried over the situation than is Stalin. In fact, the shadow of Russia looming over eastern Germany and the Balkans looks pretty dark for the Hitlerites.

Stalin sent his armies into Poland after Hitler had done most of the dirty work and grabbed the rich agricultural region of the Polish Ukraine. That was not so good for Hitler, who seriously lacks food and food sources, though having much industrial wealth. Even before the division of the Polish spoils, in which Russia got the lion's share of a bargain Hitler was in no position to protest, Stalin sent his troops hotfoot across Poland and occupied the entire Polish-Roumanian border.

Hitler has long looked wistfully upon Roumania's wheat fields and valuable oil resources, which he has needed badly. Now Russia has shut him off from them unless he goes through Hungary after it, and Stalin was selfishly shrewd enough to grab nearly of the Polish-Hungarian border, where he is in a good position to strike at Hitler if Hitler makes a move in that direction.

Thus Stalin appears to have thwarted Hitler's designs on the Balkans and has assumed an imperialistic attitude which sooner or later forecasts a clash with Germany. It is no wonder, then, that the question has arisen whether Hitler has not been flimflammed by Comrade Stalin at his own game.

Switzerland's mobilization is costing that country $1,000,000 a day, according to a cabled dispatch. Even at that price it's a bargain — compared to actual war.

The French warrior, Weygand, finds the Turks still on the fence. Only an American politician of ripe experience could sit like a Turk, on a fence.

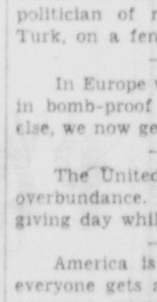
The Gulf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

There is a gulf in every human being between what he knows and what he does.

If he is happy, the gulf is no wider than a small ditch and he can jump across it.

If he is unhappy, it is wider than the Grand Canyon, wider than the ocean, and he stands on its brink, shades his eyes, and stares mournfully across its vasty deeps.



Marshall Maslin

And wonders, self-torturing and self-complaining, why he fails so miserably to achieve his heart's desires.

He would be strong, he would be kind, he would be brave. He would be thoughtful and self-constrained and less ill-tempered. . . . Why does he fail so often and so completely?

He knows better. Always he knows better. He sees the right thing to do. It shines before him like the mid-day sun. It welcomes, entreats him, promises him. Then why can't he always do it? Why does that demon of perversity, of pride, of weakness, sit at the center of him and direct him wrongly, so heartbreakingly lead him astray?

Almost any man (or woman) ought to know better than this, ought to be strong enough to do as he KNOWS best. . . . Then what is the name of that demon that drives him away from his deeper wisdom? If only he could name it, then he might be able to challenge it and conquer it.

Is is Self-Pity, perhaps? Is is Cowardice? Is it Stupidity? Is it some untamed savagery out of the ungovernable past? Is it a wild Egotism that refuses to be bound by even the best of laws?

It is a mystery, but some men fight their way through to its solution, span the great gulf and win happiness for themselves. But other men fail to narrow the space between what they know and what they do, moan fitfully forever on the brink, weep bitter tears, wave their arms wildly, grope remorsefully or self-accusingly through the hard remnants of their lives.

The Human Side Of the News

Edwin C. Hill

Sheriff Maurice A. Fitzgerald of Queens County, N. Y., recruits 1,200 deputies to keep his borough neutral and to hunt spies and saboteurs. Such vigilance is to be commended, considering our laxity and the price we paid for it in the period preceding our entry in the World war. But we aren't in any war yet, and there is reassurance in Mr. Fitzgerald's statement that there won't be any witch-hunting.

Spy hysteria is one of the least pleasant accompaniments of war tension. Just a jumpy light-socket near your bedroom window and an over-zealous neighbor may be turning you in to the John Laws for signalling to some accomplice in disloyalty. Then there is to be considered the opportunity which unscrupulous persons have for venting hatred and grudges under conditions of war psychology, or its incipient peace-time prevalence.

It seems to me that the president's salutary injunction to keep neutral might well carry an admonition not to suspect and persecute our neighbors just because we don't like them. Mr. Fitzgerald says his anti-spy legion is made of doctors, lawyers, professors and other professional men who can be depended upon for good sense and caution in turning in suspects. That is, of course, as it should be.

Highly Professionalized

Counter-espionage is a highly professionalized job which, happily, has been turned over to the superlatively efficient Federal Bureau of Investigation. A current news story from Washington reveals that more than a year ago Mr. Hoover's G-men were indentured for intensive training in spotting wreckers, spies and subversive activity in general.

There is satisfaction in the news that these preparations have been made and are being carried on at a time when it can be done without recourse to extra-legal devices. The liberties and safety of honest citizens are in less jeopardy under skilled and official scrutiny such as this than under the free-for-all of amateur spy-chasing.

Furthermore the G-men can do a much better job of getting at the real criminals than all the rest of us put together. They not only have the benefit of their specialized training, but they work in an organization which has been going for years, and which has the number of just about every trouble-breeder in the country.

I'm for the utmost vigilance, but I believe that one way to keep out of war is to pipe down on detective story thrills and romantic excitements, keep our shirts on and let the professionals attend to all this, in their own quiet way.

The amateur detective is a standing joke in our country—the lad who takes a correspondence course in trailing evildoers, gets a diploma and a tin badge and starts out on the trail. That has been a considerable ingredient of a lot of our hay-loft reading, and the urge has been by no means lessened by the pulp magazine fiction with which millions of our citizenry, principally youthful, have been fed.

After there had been about $30,000,000 worth of damage in the era just preceding our entry into the World war, we did a hurry-up job of recruiting intelligence services, military, civil and quasiofficial. Many of the zealous young counter-espionage agents were cast in the above romantic pattern. While it all came out all right in the end, we would have done a lot better had we known some of the facts of life and set up a workmanlike organization like the FBI.

We learned something. There is no question but that in the years in between wars we have vastly improved our protective intelligence work, and we have set it apart as a highly specialized detail of national policing, which it should be.

Much Better Now

The Army Intelligence Service, I am told by an army friend, is incomparably better than it was in the last war. As I see it, it is important, in all our consideration of spying and sabotage, to remember that we are not in the war, that we are neutral and that we intend to keep out of war. In this light it is clear that effective counter-espionage is a superb bulwark for peace. With slackness in this field, a few bridges blown up, another Black Tom explosion, time-bombs sinking ships—all this would fan up the war fever faster than anything you can think of.

Catching the spies and saboteurs before they do their stuff certainly will help a lot in keeping us out of war—and that is our main idea just now.—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

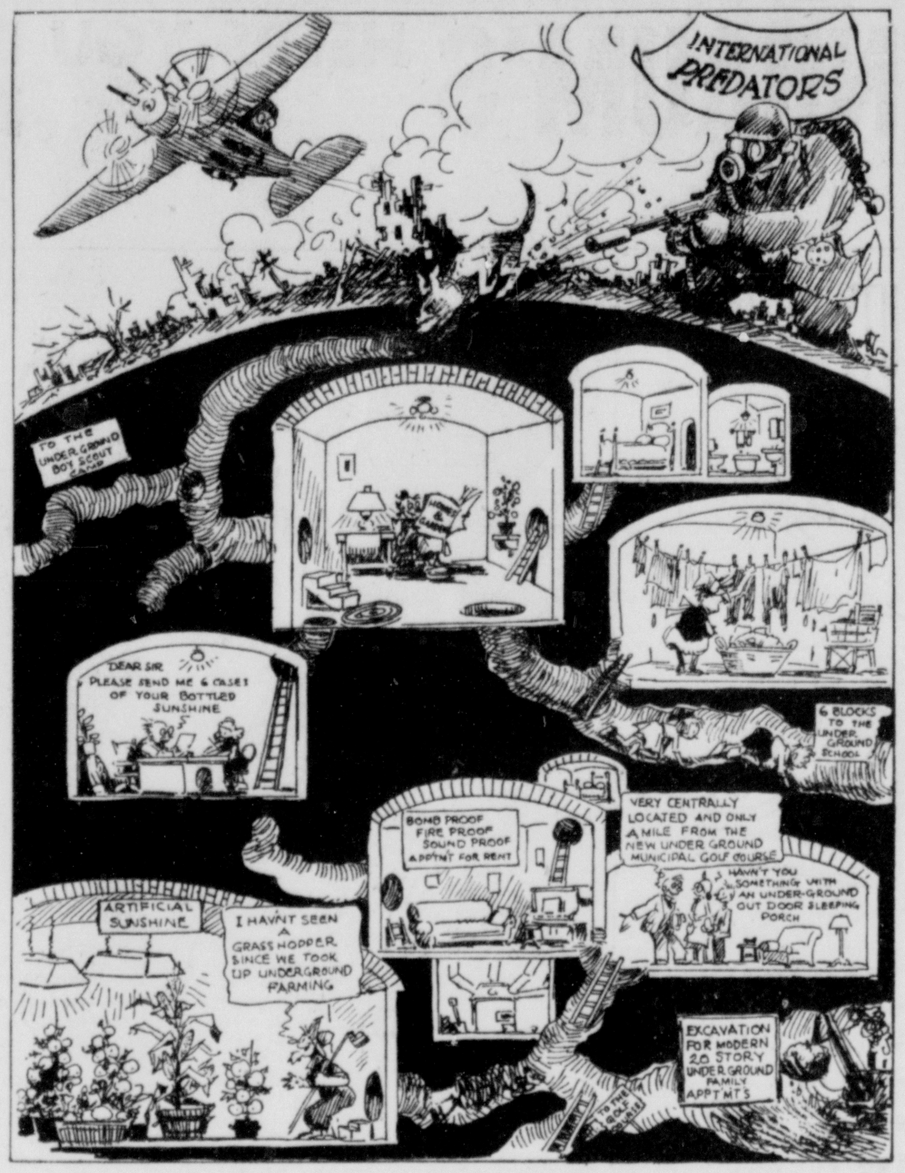
"THE WORLD OF TOMORROW"



German People, Though Now Muzzled, Really Wish To Return to Democracy

Central Press Columnist

Is Germany pro-Hitler? Would Adolf win in an honestly conducted election? Nobody can tell, of course. But I have some family connections in the Fatherland, and I've tried to find out from them, personally. If they're there at this time, naturally they don't tell. But I've seen several of them on visits to this country. Since they've intended to go back, it goes without saying that they've expressed themselves only in the faintest whispers.

Charles P. Stewart

Wants To Get Back

With the war on, the Germans want to win. At this juncture they wouldn't dump Der Fuehrer. In the long run, however, the German bulk appears to be anti-Nazistic. It wants to get back, ultimately, to democracy. It harks into a past when young Germans immigrated into the United States to escape universal military conscription.

Some of our best liberals, like Senator Carl Schurz, were of that era. And some of our rip-snorting radicals, like Governor John Peter Altgeld, of Illinois. But even Altgeld wasn't a Nazi; he was an exaggerated Democrat.

The dope I get is that today's Germany is the old-time article. It's muzzled, but only temporarily.

In the last war we had a censorship.

Said Robbie Burns of censorship:

"Here's freedom for him who would read.

"Here's freedom who would write.

"There's none ever feared that the truth should be heard.

"Save them that the truth would indict."

Let 'em fulminate, I'd say. Let 'em indict 'emselves.

Third Term Question

In a recent column I indicated my belief that present conditions hint at a third term for President Roosevelt. One of my readers, out in Iowa, replies:

"How can it be argued that in America we should abolish essential traditions merely because of war, hysterical war sentiment or because the president, at the time, happens to be obligated by his offices and authority to protect America, so far as possible, from becoming involved in war?"

Especially what my correspondent (R. F. Clough of Mason City, Ia.) is afraid of is a third Rooseveltian term. Far be it from me to boost for a third presidential term.

But I do think that a third term is hinted at by the present war situation.

Overwhelming Sentiment

"I see no reason," says my correspondent, "for adjournment of what I believe to be the overwhelming sentiment of the American people against a third term for Mr. Roosevelt or any other president of the United States.

"I should hope that newspaper writers would think this thing through and not lend themselves to the type of political propaganda indicated by the conclusion of your article"—which was to the effect that our tendency is warward.

Mine isn't, believe me. I'm a pacifist. I was so considered in the last war. But not this time. I'm anti-Hitler.

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer.

Now that the first exciting days of the European war are over and the forces of France and England and Germany and Poland settle down to the grim business of extermination, the American people have time to pause and take stock of their own position.

To the thoughtful mind it becomes constantly clearer that our chief concern should be the preservation of a strict neutrality. There are two compelling reasons for this:

To begin with, enlightened self-interest should caution us to keep clear of the conflict. If we succumb to this campaign we will assemble another batch of uncollectable war debts to store away with the last ones, and sooner or later will figure in an "incident" which will be the excuse for our entry. In short, it will be the World war all over again, with all of the evils accentuated.

If, on the other hand, we stand firm; if we keep on sawing wood; if we keep our own national interest foremost in our thoughts; if we maintain a rigid neutrality against all the pressure to deviate, we will profit as a Nation and be in a position to serve the cause of peace when the firing ceases.

Canada Gives Us A War Sample

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Chicago, Sept. 27—Canada is a good preview of what may happen to a great American, Anglo-Saxon democracy when it goes to war. It's democracy in abandon. It has barely sampled war, but Magna Carta is already in the discard and the Bill of Rights is out the window.

Freedom of speech, press and radio is gone. Canadians aren't going to bother with elections—so representative government is gone. Manufacture and selling are being put under a license system. Taxes are automatically zooming—so property rights and liberty of contract are going. The government is getting ready to regulate practically all economic relations by dictatorial decree. The appalling total of all this seems to make Hitler a piker and Mussolini a maundering mongrel.

It is too silly. Like us, Canada is 3,000 miles from the battle front. She is as yet not even fragmentarily engaged. We learned how to organize a nation for war in 1918. Canada did as good a job as any. But we didn't do it by scrapping every principle for which this country stands, at the very outset. Referring to the necessity for unity in war, Woodrow Wilson said that after "highest and best," it is the "spontaneous cooperation of a free people."

Grudging Surrender

We did the job but we gave grudgingly to every threatened invasion of the constitutional rights of our people. We treated concessions to autocracy on the principle of the right to kill in self-defense as much as was absolutely necessary and not one whit more. We engaged in no sheep-like stampede to give up our guts at the first gun-fire. Let's not let any of this European passion for regimentation spread to us by way of Canada now. If we are not much further than Canada from necessity for any kind of panicky surrender to dictatorial ballyhoo, somebody is crazy like hell.

And yet Canada has laid the error in Europe on our very doorstep. She is going across the Atlantic ocean to fight Hitler. Canada is a sovereign nation. She hasn't threatened any more than we have—which is not at all. If she is not an "aggressor," what is she?

No Engagement

And where do we stand? If the enemy she has chosen to attack in Europe counter-attacks her, hasn't our president said that we would not "stand idly by"? That may not spell an "offensive-defensive" alliance but, from the standpoint of our interests, isn't it something much worse? We haven't any engagement from Canada to defend us, but this sounds like our engagement to defend her, no matter what her fault may be. The Monroe Doctrine requires no such absurdity.

Did Canada consult us before course of war that might bring us in, regardless of our rights or interest? Our people if they heard about it, if she did. Is it conceivable that she would go to war in these circumstances without consulting our government? If she did, what was the answer?

Whose Decision?

Who makes the decisions that raise our obligation to fight? Did Canada or the British Empire make some impulsive promise of the president? Or anything at all. Did the Congress, of the United States representing the will of a majority of 130,000,000 people, see that we do not remain careful, calm and alert, it may be.

The greatest applause the president got in his last master address to the Congress came when he said that he did not now seek any new emergency powers. Thank God for that! All we need to do is look to Canada to know what "emergency powers" mean. They mean that to "save democracy" we must ditch democracy. Let's keep our shirts on and our fingers crossed. There are too many influential underlings in Washington who don't give a damn for democracy.

Drought Cause of Low Water Supply

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 27 (AP)—Shrinkage in streams and a lower water supply because of "drought condition" gave concern today to health and conservation officials.

The department of health reported no communities faced with water shortage but said the situation might shortly reach the "emergency" stage.

Conservation officials said they would order the transfer of fish from low waters if present conditions continue another week or ten days.

From an agricultural standpoint, the dry period has had little reported effect since most crops already are harvested. Plowing, however, has been delayed.

Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 27 (AP)—The Panhandle Baptist Association elected the Rev. Walter Hand, of Wheeling, moderator, succeeding the Rev. Clifford Caverle, of Sistersville.

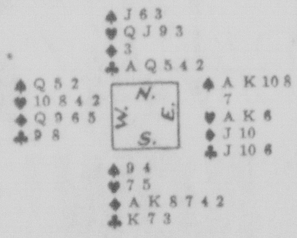
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

DUPLICATE TEACHES

THERE IS not a rubber bridge player in the land whose rubber game would not be strengthened by a bit of duplicate tournament experience. He will be helped very definitely on many close questions, because of his having seen how hands worked out when played in different contracts. In one phase of bridge, duplicate addicts as a body completely outclass rubber players of otherwise equal skill—the treatment of deals on which neither side can make a game and the objective is to chisel the result which is very slightly better than some other result. In the long run, these deals add up to points in rubber bridge just as they produce match points in duplicate.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

Two tables of a duplicate game produced the same early bidding on this deal. South bid 1-Diamond, North 2-Clubs, East 2-Spades, South 3-Diamonds, North 3-Hearts to make clear that he had five clubs and only four hearts, then East 3-Spades. At the table where an experienced duplicate performer sat South, this was passed. At the other, South bid 4-Clubs, which East doubled.

Against East's spades, the defenders took two tricks in each minor, then South led a heart. East won with the A, ruffed a club, and led the diamond Q. Had North discarded, East could have thrown his losing heart. North ruffed with the 3, East overruffing with the 7. The spade A was won, dummy's spade Q taken, and the diamond 9 furnished a heart discard, assuring the contract worth 90 tricks plus 50 bonus.

At 4-Clubs, East set the contract promptly with two tricks in each major, for a score of 200, winning the deal for his side. This also would have been a better result at rubber bridge, 200 above the line being more valuable than 90 below it.

SALLY'S SALLIES

There is a story in every girl's face—and it's usually one she has made up herself.

The Eyes Have It—With Long Lashes!

NORMA SHEARER . . . long lashes enhance her sparkling eyes.

* * * * * *

By HELEN FOLLETT

LONG, BLACK, curly eyelashes! If you haven't them, Mama Nature has short-changed you. They're romantic, and they're nice to flutter when the New Number is dragging you around to parties, telling you what a honey you are.

Those pretty fringes respond to care, and care is something they seldom get. Bathe them with hot water, then with cold. The reaction will hustle up the tiny blood streams upon which the winkers live. At night friction with mineral oil, which won't hurt your eyes in case it gets in 'em. Don't rub vigorously. Close the eyelids, sweep the oil back and forth.

Only a thoughtless girl will trim the lashes. The delicate needle-point ends are removed, cannot be restored because the shafts push out from the flesh in tiny overlapping scales. Blunt as the bristles of a toothbrush they are then. They look scrubby and horrid.

If the lashes are light in color, black mascara can be applied. It is not suitable for the eyebrows if the skin is fair; too much of a contrast. Dark brown is a better choice.

By using a small brush, the bristles of which have been dipped in mineral oil, eyelid frills can be given exercise. Let the shafts rest over the finger, groom upward to give a pretty tilt to the ends.

A common foot ill is a corn-like growth at the back of the foot where the top of the shoe rubs against the flesh. These calloused spots can cause discomfort; they get heavy and grey and look ugly.

Soak the foot in warm soap suds for 10 or 15 minutes. Friction the flesh with a pumice stone, massage with olive oil.

A cobbler can stretch the shoe, put in a piece of thin felt which will do away with pressure.

Wives Report Reactions to Homebreakers

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Two or three weeks ago this column printed a letter which has brought in a tremendous response, especially from the aggrieved class—wives whose homes have been wrecked by homebreakers.

The Homebreaker who wrote to me, boldly stated her point of view. Said she had been engaged in a prolonged love affair with a married man, for which she expressed no remorse or repentance. Her argument was that a man who has found love outside of marriage wishes to insure himself against losing this love. To which end he tries to keep his wife contented, free of jealousy or suspicion. He gives "more time, consideration and inward thought to her well-being than she would other wise enjoy."

Naturally, the wives differ from the point of view of the Homebreaker and the following are some of their letters.

She Will Have to Answer to God

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Doesn't the woman who wrote you, that a hole-in-the-corner affair makes husbands kinder to wives, know what men, deep down in their hearts, think of a "kept' woman? And has she forgotten that some day she will have to answer to God for breaking his commandments?

"RELIGIOUS WIFE."

Homebreaker Will Be Trapped

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"The Homebreaker, who wrote to your column a little while ago, justifying her action in helping herself to another woman's husband, has completely overlooked the fact that wives are more clever than men in sensing these affairs, and that sooner or later husband and homebreaker are trapped.

"Few men, unless they're absolute slaves to their illicit desires, are willing to give up wife, home, children, friends, and often jobs, for the sake of these bargain-counter women.

WOMAN WHO KNOWS."

These letters are highly interesting as human documents. We'll be glad to publish more of them.—Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Answers to "Homebreaker"

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"A woman who suggests that a man gives his wife more attention to keep her contented and free from jealousy is a snake in the grass. A man does these things to keep his wife from knowing that another woman is in the picture. He may go out of his way to be nice to his wife, to lull her suspicions.

"I speak with authority. A friend of mine, who came to our home presumably to see me, was carrying on an affair with my husband. And only through a misdirected telephone call did I uncover the truth. It caused our separation and broke up my little children's home.

"NO APOLOGIST FOR SNAKES"

Case of Wish-Fulfillment

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"A woman who tries to excuse her conduct for stealing another woman's husband and arguing that such clandestine affairs make husbands kinder to their wives is experiencing a case of wish-fulfillment.' Her phoney position spurs her into making specious arguments.

"HAPPY WIFE."

The Eternal Triangle Again

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I seem powerless to handle my own sad problem, which has strained my mind to a degree that I feel mentally ill. I must confide in someone. You will, I'm sure, give me some sensible advice.

I've tried to reason with my husband, recalling our married happiness of twenty years. But this meets with only stubbornness and reticence, for the girl he sees daily is young and interesting. He provides comfortably for my children and myself, is home regularly, but displays little interest in anything at home.

We have a nice home. Children who are growing up need this background, but my mind seems to be failing, and I cannot summon sufficient effort for my daily task. How can I adapt my mental attitude to this situation? My husband does not yet seem inclined to break up our home. Nevertheless, I feel I cannot stand the worry and strain much longer.

UNHAPPY WIFE

Of course, you feel you must get away from a situation that has grown to be as intolerable as pressure on a bruise. But, would it be fair to your children to break up your home and leave them to their fate? For I need not stress

He provides comfortably for my children and myself, is home regularly, but displays little interest in anything at home.

We have a nice home. Children who are growing up need this background, but my mind seems to be failing, and I cannot summon sufficient effort for my daily task. How can I adapt my mental attitude to this situation? My husband does not yet seem inclined to break up our home. Nevertheless, I feel I cannot stand the worry and strain much longer.

UNHAPPY WIFE

Of course, you feel you must get away from a situation that has grown to be as intolerable as pressure on a bruise. But, would it be fair to your children to break up your home and leave them to their fate? For I need not stress

The Eyes Have It—With Long Lashes!

NORMA SHEARER . . . long lashes enhance her sparkling eyes.

* * * * * * *

By HELEN FOLLETT

LONG, BLACK, curly eyelashes! If you haven't them, Mama Nature has short-changed you. They're romantic, and they're nice to flutter when the New Number is dragging you around to parties, telling you what a honey you are.

Those pretty fringes respond to care, and care is something they seldom get. Bathe them with hot water, then with cold. The reaction will hustle up the tiny blood streams upon which the winkers live. At night friction with mineral oil, which won't hurt your eyes in case it gets in 'em. Don't rub vigorously. Close the eyelids, sweep the oil back and forth.

Only a thoughtless girl will trim the lashes. The delicate needle-point ends are removed, cannot be restored because the shafts push out from the flesh in tiny overlapping scales. Blunt as the bristles of a toothbrush they are then. They look scrubby and horrid.

If the lashes are light in color, black mascara can be applied. It is not suitable for the eyebrows if the skin is fair; too much of a contrast. Dark brown is a better choice.

By using a small brush, the bristles of which have been dipped in mineral oil, eyelid frills can be given exercise. Let the shafts rest over the finger, groom upward to give a pretty tilt to the ends.

A common foot ill is a corn-like growth at the back of the foot where the top of the shoe rubs against the flesh. These calloused spots can cause discomfort; they get heavy and grey and look ugly.

Soak the foot in warm soap suds for 10 or 15 minutes. Friction the flesh with a pumice stone, massage with olive oil.

A cobbler can stretch the shoe, put in a piece of thin felt which will do away with pressure.

Fear Is Greatest Hazard in Study Of Arithmetic

School Work Is Retarded by Unpleasant Emotions

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Most trouble children have over arithmetic should never happen, since the bulk of it concerns such very simple matters as four plus nine, fifteen minus six, and eight times seven. Even in the fifth and sixth grades these basic items are the most troublesome. Why? The learning has been retarded by unpleasant emotions, chiefly fear. The child has had to hurry. He has never learned these items with precision, and his drill, or practice, has been a repetition of mistakes as well as of correct responses.

Let me beg the teacher of the intermediate grades to check each child individually on the simple number facts in addition, subtraction, multiplication. If you can make him feel entirely relaxed and unafraid, you can soon ascertain the nature of any trouble he may have with these matters.

Make Him Comfortable

In case he pauses or makes errors with these combinations, get him to tell you what went on in his mind as he tried to think of each answer. If you can make him feel wholly comfortable, you may discover that he has been counting the numbers out in his mind, than which there can be no more wasteful and distressing method.

If, instead, you hurry him and keep on having him go over and over these combinations in more tests, he is likely to make little or no gain in accuracy. Instead, he may become worse. And if he counts or makes mistakes, don't scold him. Don't make him feel he should be ashamed. Make it not a matter of shame at all. Just show him how to learn these items with efficiency. Write out the whole combination (including answers) of those he has trouble with, attacking only four or five at a sitting.

No Rebuke

I wish parents would also do as I have advised the teacher. Remember, no show of irritation, no sign of rebuke, no suggestion of haste. The moment you feel the development of a disturbance at the pit of your stomach, walk away. You are not then fit to be in the presence of a child attempting to learn. Go to bed or walk around the block. Pray for poise, my fellow parent or teacher, if you would help the child escape the common tragedies of arithmetic. Some day all stop-watch teaching will be outlawed.

If your child has trouble in arithmetic, or in any other school subject, write me about him, enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope. I might be able to suggest some ways of helping him.

L.S.U. on Losing End Of Unusual Transaction

New Orleans, Sept. 27 (AP)—Louisiana State University was listed on the losing end of another transaction today with the return of three embezzlement indictments charging a five-story building was moved 162 feet and then moved back again at a cost of about $500,000.

The Orleans Parish grand jury alleged $62,485.86 of the money advanced to recondition the building after it had been shoved around on the university's charity hospital grounds where was not used for that purpose.

The jury charged embezzlement to Dr. James Monroe Smith, former LSU president now under forty-two indictments and charges involving the school, architect Leon C. Weiss and contractor Monte E. Hart.

Weiss had been previously indicted while Smith and Hart are under sentence after conviction on mail fraud charges in another case in which the university lost $75,000 in the Bienville hotel sale here.

Stocks Close Unchanged after Day of Advances and Declines

Recent Favorites Lose from One to Two Points

New York, Sept. 27. (AP)—War shares were handed out at lower prices in a confused stock market today.

Steels, aircrafts, chemicals and other recent favorites retired from advance posts, many losing 1 to around 2 points.

Covering the retreat were flurries of buying in motors, rubbers, rails and utilities. Final prices showed a mixture of gains and declines which left the Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks unchanged at 53.5.

Business news continued bullish, especially mounting rail equipment orders and indications for plant improvements

Among the chief losers were United States Steel, Bethlehem Steel, du Pont, Douglas Aircraft, Union Carbide, Anaconda, International Nickel, Dome Mines, Homestake and Johns-Manville.

Transactions totaled 2,339,920 shares against 1,712,670 the previous session.

Fractions to 2 higher in the curb were South Pen Oil, Fansteel Metallurgical, Electric Bond and Share and Niagara Hudson Power. Lockheed and American Cyanamid "B" backed away. Turnover of 334,000 shares compared with 248,000 Tuesday.

Maryland Business Schools To Be Taxed

Baltimore, Sept. 27 (AP) — Maryland business schools will feel taxation's pinch, under the revamped state tax laws effective next year.

In past years, schools, hospitals, and asylums were exempt from all levies. Under the new setup, exemptions will be granted only to institutions or organizations "no part of whose net income inures to the benefit of any private share-holder or individual."

Tax commission officials said there were business schools in nearly every fair-sized town in Maryland.

In addition, the new law will equalize treatment of finance companies owned out side the state and those owned here. It will likewise provide uniform assessments for the personal property or foreign companies owned in Maryland counties.

The 1939 legislature enacted the measure to erase obsolete sections from present tax laws, gear them to modern business practice and plug loopholes.

Fascist Papers Rap U. S. Neutrality

Rome, Sept. 27 (AP) — Italian newspapers all criticized proposals that the United States sell arms on a "cash and carry basis as "false neutrality."

At the same time, Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, expressed doubts France and Britain ever would defeat Germany except in "a victory submerged in the ashes of universal devastation."

Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia, declared:

"Signor Roosevelt is no longer neutral. x x x His recent message to Congress is an attempt manifestly directed to prepare for direct compromising of the United States in the dangerous maze of European quarrels. x x x"

Il Popolo D'Italia Corriere Della Sera, important Milan newspaper, said that in practice England and France would benefit from the cash and carry plan, and added: "If this is neutrality it is necessary to change the meaning of the word."

Both Il Tribuna and Il Messaggero said such a policy would only prolong the war.

400 Workers To Vote In NLRB Election

Fear Is Greatest Hazard in Study Of Arithmetic

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Most trouble children have over arithmetic should never happen, since the bulk of it concerns such very simple matters as four plus nine, fifteen minus six, and eight times seven. Even in the fifth and sixth grades these basic items are the most troublesome. Why? The learning has been retarded by unpleasant emotions, chiefly fear. The child has had to hurry. He has never learned these items with precision, and his drill, or practice, has been a repetition of mistakes as well as of correct responses.

Let me beg the teacher of the intermediate grades to check each child individually on the simple number facts in addition, subtraction, multiplication. If you can make him feel entirely relaxed and unafraid, you can soon ascertain the nature of any trouble he may have with these matters.

Make Him Comfortable

In case he pauses or makes errors with these combinations, get him to tell you what went on in his mind as he tried to think of each answer. If you can make him feel wholly comfortable, you may discover that he has been counting the numbers out in his mind, than which there can be no more wasteful and dissipating method.

If, instead, you hurry him and keep on having him go over and over these combinations in more tests, he is likely to make little or no gain in accuracy. Instead, he may become worse. And if he counts or makes mistakes, don't scold him. Don't make him feel he should be ashamed. Make it not a matter of shame at all. Just show him how to learn these items with efficiency. Write out the whole combination (including answers) of those he has trouble with, attacking only four or five at a sitting.

No Rebuke

I wish parents would also do as I have advised the teacher. Remember, no show of irritation, no sign of rebuke, no suggestion of haste. The moment you feel the development of a disturbance at the pit of your stomach, walk away. You are not then fit to be in the presence of a child attempting to learn. Go to bed or walk around the block. Pray for poise, my fellow parent or teacher, if you would help the child escape the common tragedies of arithmetic. Some day all stop-watch teaching will be outlawed. If your child has trouble in arithmetic, or in any other school subject, write me about him, enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope. I might be able to suggest some ways of helping him.

L.S.U. on Losing End Of Unusual Transaction

New Orleans, Sept. 27 (AP)—Louisiana State University was listed on the losing end of another transaction today with the return of three embezzlement indictments charging a five-story building was moved 162 feet and then moved back again at a cost of about $500,000.

The Orleans Parish grand jury charged $62,485.86 of the money advanced to recondition the building after it had been shoved around on the university's charity hospital grounds before was not used for that purpose.

The jury charged embezzlement to T. James Monroe Smith, former LSU president now under forty-two indictments and charges involving the school, architect Leon C. Weiss and contractor Monte E. Hart.

Weiss had been previously indicted while Smith and Hart are under sentence after conviction on mail fraud charges in another case in which the university lost $75,000 in the Bienville hotel sale here.

Stocks Close Unchanged after Day of Advances and Declines

Recent Favorites Lose from One to Two Points

New York, Sept. 27. (AP)—War shares were handed out at lower prices in a confused stock market today.

Steels, aircrafts, chemicals and other recent favorites retired from advance posts, many losing 1 to around 2 points.

Covering the retreat were flurries of buying in motors, rubbers, rails and utilities. Final prices showed a mixture of gains and declines which left the Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks unchanged at 53.5.

Business news continued bullish, especially mounting rail equipment orders and indications for plant improvements.

Among the chief losers were United States Steel, Bethlehem Steel, du Pont, Douglas Aircraft, Union Carbide, Anaconda, International Nickel, Dome Mines, Homestake and Johns-Manville.

Transactions totaled 2,339,920 shares against 1,712,670 the previous session.

Fractions to 2 higher in the curb were South Pen Oil, Fansteel Metallurgical, Electric Bond and Share and Niagara Hudson Power. Lockheed and American Cyanamid "B" backed away. Turnover of 334,000 shares compared with 248,000 Tuesday.

Maryland Business Schools To Be Taxed

Baltimore, Sept. 27 (AP) — Maryland business schools will feel taxation's pinch, under the revamped state tax laws effective next year.

In past years, schools, hospitals, and asylums were exempt from all levies. Under the new setup, exemptions will be granted only to institutions or organizations "no part of whose net income inures to the benefit of any private share-holder or individual."

Tax commission officials said there were business schools in nearly every fair-sized town in Maryland.

In addition, the new law will equalize treatment of finance companies owned out side the state and those owned here. It will likewise provide uniform assessments for the personal property or foreign companies owned in Maryland counties.

The 1939 legislature enacted the measure to erase obsolete sections from present tax laws, gear them to modern business practice and plug loopholes.

Fascist Papers Rap U. S. Neutrality

Rome, Sept. 27 (AP) — Italian newspapers all criticized proposals that the United States sell arms on a "cash and carry basis as "false neutrality."

At the same time, Virginio Gayda authoritative Fascist editor, expressed doubts France and Britain ever would defeat Germany except in "a victory submerged in the ashes of universal devastation."

Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia, declared:

"Signor Roosevelt is no longer neutral. x x x His recent message to Congress is an attempt manifestly directed to prepare for direct compromising of the United States in the dangerous maze of European quarrels. x x x."

Il Popolo D'Italia Corriere Della Sera, important Milan newspaper, said that in practice England and France would benefit from the cash and carry plan, and added: "If this is neutrality it is necessary to change the meaning of the word."

Both Il Tribuna and Il Messaggero said such a policy would only prolong the war.

Shadow Over Hill House

By ELLIOTT FILLION

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS

Sally Gordon is at Hill House for a vacation, at the instigation of her friend, Rhoda. At Hill House Sally meets Mrs. Peake, the proprietor, her son, Neal, and Rhoda. At dinner Sally meets the others: Mrs. Peake's daughter, Josie; Coral Easton, in love with Neal; Mrs. Rutherford; her daughter, Pauline, also in love with Neal, and her son, Dr. Paul Rutherford. Mrs. Rutherford tells of a prowler she heard the night before. Bruce Orton, Joseph Barry and Duncan Abbot, Rhoda's fiance, complete the household at the summer resort. That evening Sally overhears bits of a queer conversation in the garden. While Josie is telling Sally about "the spite fence" erected by Mrs. Peake's estranged sister, Miss Ivy Newcomb, near Hill House, Pauline Rutherford rushes in.

"This is to be kept a secret. Mother was poisoned!"

CHAPTER SIX

JOSIE AND I sprang to our feet when Pauline so unceremoniously burst in. "Where's Neal?" she was still crying. Then: "Mother's awfully sick!"

"Neal's in Bruce Orton's cottage. I'll get him." On fleet feet Josie sped away.

I went to Pauline. "Can I help?" I reasoned it must be more than a slight sickness to terrify her so.

"She's terribly sick. I'm afraid—she'll—DIE." Her last word was a wail.

"You mustn't give way, Pauline," I said sternly. "Let's go. Maybe I can help."

"They sent me out—told me to find Neal—not to come back."

Her slight figure was trembling uncontrollably. Plainly the girl was on the verge of collapse. It was no time for maudlin sympathy. I must cut deep to keep her strong. I drew her to the fire and made her sit down in a chair I pushed forward.

"Now, snap out of it," I said harshly. "This is no time to play baby. You sit there until I come back."

I rushed to my room, grabbed a glass and the bottle of brandy I always carry with me for emergencies, and dashed back to the lounge. I poured out as strong a drink as I dared and bade her drink it.

She obeyed me unquestioningly, and in a short time the faint color began to creep back into her pallid cheeks.

"Now, you listen to me, Pauline Rutherford," I snapped sternly as soon as her shaking ceased. "If your mother is as sick as you say, she may need you. Forget yourself and think only of her. You must. Come, we'll go to the cottage and see if there's anything we can do."

She looked at me with a wan smile, squared her slender shoulders and rose to her feet.

"You're a good scout, Sally Gordon." She squeezed my arm in a meaning grip. "I won't play the fool again."

We went through a wing corridor which corresponded to mine, through a door at the end onto a roofed way which connected the two cottages. The fog swirled around us in dank ghostliness. The mournful note of the foghorn smote my ears. I shivered as the chill wind bit through my thin garments.

The first cottage was dark except for a light over the door which also lighted the covered way. The second blazed with lights, faintly seen through the ever-thickening vapor.

In the living room, Josie was standing with head bent in a listening attitud... She spoke quickly as we entered.

"Neal's with Paul," she announced, "and mother's there, too. There isn't anything we can do, but Paul said for me to stay here, there might be some errand they'd want done in a hurry."

"Do you suppose she's better?" asked Pauline, wistfully. Her snippy truculence was gone. I found myself really liking the girl. She did love her mother and wasn't ashamed to show it.

Josie shook her head. "I don't know, Pauline. But I'm sure that with two such doctors as Paul and Neal they'll pull her through if it's possible."

Pauline sighed and, walking over to the window, stood looking out into the night. The curtain was not drawn. Looking into the thick white smother was like gazing into a fleecy blanket. How long she stood there I do not know. Neal's entrance broke the long silence.

"Josie, we need these things at once. Will you go to the drug store for them?" He handed her a list as he spoke, and turned back to the door. But Pauline's hand was on his arm.

"How is she? Will she get better? You must tell me—you must!" she cried, as Neal hesitated.

"I think so, Pauline. Don't lose your courage. She's been terribly sick, but she's a little easier now. I mustn't stop. I'll send Paul out to you as soon as he can leave your mother."

"Is there something—anything—that I can do?" she pleaded. "I feel so useless."

"Yes, go with Josie for those things." He was gone with his last word.

But Pauline would not leave the cottage. I didn't blame her. It was cruel to even suggest her doing so. Suppose something happened while she was gone? In the end I was the one who went with Josie.

I'll never forget that ride. On the way to the parking space we met Bruce Orton.

"I've been hanging around hoping there would be something I can do," he said. "I told Neal that, as I'm not a doctor, I wouldn't butt in, but if he wanted anything which I could do for him to whistle and I'd hear him."

"We're going to the drug store for some things," Josie hurriedly explained.

"Take my car," he offered. "It's easier to manage than either of yours."

"I wouldn't dare," Josie said. "I'm not an expert driver, anyway." As she spoke she led the way to a great lumbering old car which I would have hesitated to drive, and I've been handling a wheel for years.

"You're not going to drive that thing," I gasped.

"The only other car we have is the beach wagon, and that has soft tires for the sand," she explained.

"I'll drive," I said. "I've never driven in the fog and I don't know the way, but if you'll tell me just when to turn and so forth, we'll get there."

As I spoke I sprang into little old Bouncy and stepped on the starter. Her instantaneous response was heartening. That little car never has refused to do her duty yet, and I can almost make her sit up on her hind legs—wheel—and beg.

Josie hesitated a bit, but I got my own way. That damned old white elephant of a Cadillac would require the strength of ten men to change a tire, and I wasn't feeling giantish if a flat happened at that hour.

I'll never forget that ride. I'd driven in a blinding snowstorm several times, and I had thought that the hardest driving possible. But the fog was worse.

I couldn't tell where the sides of the road were, whether we were on a straight-away or on a sharp curve. Only by constant attention, careful creeping on and on, did I finally make the drug store in Winnetaumet village.

Josie was not long inside. Fortunately the things which were wanted were all in stock, and in less than five minutes from the time I braked to a stop we were again on our way.

The return trip wasn't so hard. Whether my courage was returning or whether some sixth sense takes charge in a smothering fog, I don't know; but it seemed no time at all before we rolled through the gate of Hill House.

When we entered the living room of the Rutherford cottage, it was to find two angry, disgruntled men confronting Pauline, who was almost in tears.

"I tell you I didn't leave the room at all," she was saying. "And what matter if I had? You wouldn't let me help. I might as well have been ten miles away."

"Forget all that, sis." Paul spoke roughly. "You must have left the room sometime while Josie and Miss Gordon were gone." He ignored our return. All his attention was concentrated on his sister.

"I tell you I did not!" Pauline was angry now. "Not for one—" She stopped, clapped her hand over her mouth and looked with stricken eyes at Paul. "I did go out," she whispered. "I felt so awful I went to the bathroom and bathed my face with cold water as soon as Josie and Sally left."

"That's the answer, Neal." Paul swung on his heel and looked at Neal, who nodded soberly in return.

Paul reached out and took Josie's bundle. "We'll take another look at mother; then we'll come back here and talk to you girls. Wait for us."

Pauline looked at us defiantly as the men went out. "Mother is much better. Paul says she will get well. But I think he has gone completely whacky!"

Before we could reply Dr. Paul and Neal returned. They drew us into a close huddle and Dr. Paul said:

"This is to be kept a secret. Mother was poisoned. She was cold when we came in from our drive, so I poured her a small drink from my whiskey bottle. She drank it and was immediately taken sick. Neal and I have saved her. But the point is, the poison was not intended for her. It was meant for me.

the unhappiness and insecurity of children bereft of a home.

You tell me that your husband does not seem inclined to break up your home, and that he is there pretty regularly. What if this is just a dash of middle-aged vanity—what is known as the last call for dinner in the dining-car—and he sees this young woman because it preserves an illusion on his part? Don't talk about it to him. It's most unfortunate that you should have brought up the subject in the first place. Act as if the homebreaker doesn't exist. It's going to be terribly hard, but dry your tears and look cheerful. You will be doing this for your children's sake.

Skips Public Demonstration

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married for five years to a man just a little bit older than I am. I'm 24. We have a baby girl two years old, who is very adorable, and we're both crazy about her. I'm very much in love with my husband, and if anything should happen to him, I just couldn't live. But he's so different from husbands of other girls in my crowd.

When we get together at each other's homes, these other husbands spoon occasionally, and kiss their wives, while mine never even thinks of petting in public.

Another thing is he doesn't romp with the baby as other fathers do. I don't say he's grouchy, but he just isn't loving and when I put my arms around him he says: "Now, must we go through all that again?" Sometimes I feel like leaving.

He tells me his love is in his heart, and that it isn't necessary to wear it on his sleeves. Do you think I'm unfair?

LOVING WIFE.

If this gentleman were my husband, I should prefer his reserve to the public petting you tell me goes on among your friends. This demonstration is apt to be mighty funny to all but the petters. Haven't you been amused by it on suburban cars, returning from beaches or parks in the summer time?

When your husband tells you his affection is in his heart, better take that for granted. You say you couldn't live without him, so why on earth do you think of leaving?

If you will forgive me for saying so, I think you're looking for trouble.

Boys Gold Diggers, Too

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We know a group of boys and girls who run around together. The girls give parties and invite the boys, and also invite the boys to other social events. But the boys never take the girls out, although they can well afford to do so. What do you think the girls should do to correct this?

STUDENT.

The best way to correct boys who have no sense of social obligation in the way of returning treats is to stop inviting them to parties or other social events.

Doesn't Answer His Phone Calls

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A couple of weeks ago I failed to keep an engagement with my girl friend, because I had an unexpected call to do overtime at the office and couldn't reach her on the phone. Next day when I called to explain, she hung up the receiver, and when I wrote her a letter, she sent it back unopened.

Could anyone have influenced her against me? It seems so queer, because she was always so reasonable before I had to break that date with her. DICK.

She's probably just indulging in a few tantrums about the broken date. Why not let her severely alone for a while, when I think she is very likely to come around and realize how unreasonable she has been. You were certainly at liberty to break a date, when your business demanded it.

Wants Photograph Returned

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I went with a young man for six months, during which time I gave him my photograph in a rather expensive frame. It is now almost four months since I have seen or heard from him, and I feel that I should like to have my picture returned. Would it be proper for me to write, asking him to return it, as it is probably only cluttering up his other belongings? SUNTANNED.

As you have not seen this young man for four months and he has made no effort to continue the acquaintance, it would be quite proper, under the circumstances, to ask him to return your framed photograph.

Perplexed About Gift

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I met a girl about six weeks ago, and have fallen in love with her. As she doesn't live in this city, we have been corresponding, and she sent me her photograph. Now she has invited me to spend a few days at her home, and I am somewhat in doubt as to whether I should give her mother a little gift, a small article showing my appreciation. Or would flowers be the proper thing to give her?

This girl is very charming, possesses everything to comply with my standards, and we seem to have many things in common. I am a person with whom girls find it difficult to get acquainted, although I do not believe I'm conceited. I'm apt to be friendly. But being in business, and seeing life as it is, has built a wall which this girl seems to have penetrated. I have fallen a hundred per cent in love. How can I handle this situation in the most diplomatic way? E. J. N.

Flowers are always a safe and delightful gift to receive. A box of candy is sure to be appreciated, or a basket of fruit. It is always safer to give trivial things to a girl's mother unless the engagement to the daughter has been announced.

Shadow Over Hill House

By ELLIOTT FILLION

SYNOPSIS

Sally Gordon is at Hill House for a vacation, at the instigation of her friend, Rhoda. At Hill House Sally meets Mrs. Peake, the proprietor, her son, Neal, and Rhoda. At dinner Sally meets the others: Mrs. Peake's daughter, Josie; Coral Easton, in love with Neal; Mrs. Rutherford; her daughter, Pauline, also in love with Neal, and her son, Dr. Paul Rutherford. Mrs. Rutherford tells of a prowler she heard the night before. Bruce Orton, Joseph Barry and Duncan Abbot, Rhoda's fiance, complete the household at the summer resort. That evening Sally overhears bits of a queer conversation in the garden. While Josie is telling Sally about "the spite fence" erected by Mrs. Peake's estranged sister, Miss Ivy Newcomb, near Hill House, Pauline Rutherford rushes in.

"This is to be kept a secret. Mother was poisoned!"

CHAPTER SIX.

JOSIE AND I sprang to our feet when Pauline so unceremoniously burst in. "Where's Neal?" she was still crying. Then: "Mother's awfully sick!"

"Neal's in Bruce Orton's cottage. I'll get him." On fleet feet Josie sped away.

I went to Pauline. "Can I help?" I reasoned it must be more than a slight sickness to terrify her so.

"She's terribly sick. I'm afraid—she'll—DIE," Her last word was a wail.

"You mustn't give way, Pauline," I said sternly. "Let's go. Maybe I can help."

"They sent me out—told me to find Neal—not to come back."

Her slight figure was trembling uncontrollably. Plainly the girl was on the verge of collapse. It was no time for maudlin sympathy. I must cut deep to keep her strong. I drew her to the fire and made her sit down in a chair I pushed forward.

"Now, snap out of it," I said harshly. "This is no time to play baby. You sit there until I come back."

I rushed to my room, grabbed a glass and the bottle of brandy I always carry with me for emergencies, and dashed back to the lounge. I poured out as strong a drink as I dared and bade her drink it.

She obeyed me unquestioningly, and in a short time the faint color began to creep back into her pallid cheeks.

"Now, you listen to me, Pauline Rutherford," I snapped sternly as soon as her shaking ceased. "If your mother is as sick as you say, she may need you. Forget yourself and think only of her. You must. Come, we'll go to the cottage and see if there's anything we can do."

She looked at me with a wan smile, squared her slender shoulders and rose to her feet.

"You're a good scout, Sally Gordon." She squeezed my arm in a meaning grip. "I won't play the fool again."

We went through a wing corridor which corresponded to mine, through a door at the end onto a roofed way which connected the two cottages. The fog swirled around us in dank ghostliness. The mournful note of the foghorn smote my ears. I shivered as the chill wind bit through my thin garments.

The first cottage was dark except for a light over the door which also lighted the covered way. The second blazed with lights, faintly seen through the ever-thickening vapor.

In the living room, Josie was standing with head bent in a listening attitud... She spoke quickly as we entered.

"Neal's with Paul," she announced, "and mother's there, too. There isn't anything we can do, but Paul said for me to stay here, there might be some errand they'd want done in a hurry."

"Do you suppose she's better?" asked Pauline, wistfully. Her snippy truculence was gone. I found myself really liking the girl. She did love her mother and wasn't ashamed to show it.

Josie shook her head. "I don't know, Pauline. But I'm sure that with two such doctors as Paul and Neal they'll pull her through if it's possible."

Pauline sighed and, walking over to the window, stood looking out into the night. The curtain was not drawn. Looking into the thick white smother was like gazing into a fleecy blanket. How long she stood there I do not know. Neal's entrance broke the long silence.

"Josie, we need these things at once. Will you go to the drug store for them?" He handed her a list as he spoke, and turned back to the door. But Pauline's hand was on his arm.

"How is she? Will she get better? You must tell me—you must!" she cried, as Neal hesitated.

"I think so, Pauline. Don't lose your courage. She's been terribly sick, but she's a little easier now. I mustn't stop. I'll send Paul out to you as soon as he can leave your mother."

"Is there something—anything—that I can do?" she pleaded. "I feel so useless."

"Yes, go with Josie for those things." He was gone with his last word.

But Pauline would not leave the cottage. I didn't blame her. It was cruel to even suggest her doing so. Suppose something happened while she was gone? In the end I was the one who went with Josie.

I'll never forget that ride. On the way to the parking space we met Bruce Orton.

"I've been hanging around hoping there would be something I can do," he said. "I told Neal that, as I'm not a doctor, I wouldn't butt in, but if he wanted anything which I could do for him to whistle and I'd hear him."

"We're going to the drug store for some things," Josie hurriedly explained.

"Take my car," he offered. "It's easier to manage than either of yours."

"I wouldn't dare," Josie said. "I'm not an expert driver, anyway." As she spoke she led the way to a great lumbering old car which I would have hesitated to drive, and I've been handling a wheel for years.

"You're not going to drive that thing," I gasped.

"The only other car we have is the beach wagon, and that has soft tires for the sand," she explained.

"I'll drive," I said. "I've never driven in the fog and I don't know the way, but if you'll tell me just when to turn and so forth, we'll get there."

As I spoke I sprang into little old Bouncy and stepped on the starter. Her instantaneous response was heartening. That little car never has refused to do her duty yet, and I can almost make her sit up on her hind legs—wheel—and beg.

Josie hesitated a bit, but I got my own way. That darned old white elephant of a Cadillac would require the strength of ten men to change a tire, and I wasn't feeling giantish if a flat happened at that hour.

I'll never forget that ride. I'd driven in a blinding snowstorm several times, and I had thought that the hardest driving possible. But the fog was worse.

I couldn't tell where the sides of the road were, whether we were on a straight-away or on a sharp curve. Only by constant attention, careful creeping on and on, did I finally make the drug store in Winnetaumet village.

Josie was not long inside. Fortunately the things which were wanted were all in stock, and in less than five minutes from the time I braked to a stop we were again on our way.

The return trip wasn't so hard. Whether my courage was returning or whether some sixth sense takes charge in a smothering fog, I don't know; but it seemed no time at all before we rolled through the gate of Hill House.

"That's the answer, Neal." Paul swung on his heel and looked at Neal, who nodded soberly in return.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring spots affecting the outer or surface layer of the skin often result from a temporary disturbance, or merely from incorrect cleansing.

You can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and help your skin by using an ointment whose medication stays in active contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For nearly 45 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It soothes the irritated oil ducts where many surface pimples start, and aids healing. Carefully cleansing the skin with Resinol Soap helps to quicken the pleasing results. Its gently active lather is refreshing and it rinses easily.

Buy a jar of Resinol Ointment and cake of Resinol Soap from any druggist. For free sample, write Resinol, Dept. 89, Baltimore, Md.

Fairmont Woman Home From Foreign Service

Fairmont, W. Va., Sept. 27 (AP)—The European war has ended for Mrs. Florence H. Hillard eight years in the foreign service, seven of them in the embassy at Warsaw.

She has returned to her home here from the war-devastated area, advised by Ambassador A. J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., to leave Poland as quickly as possible. That was just before the outbreak of hostilities, in the late part of August.

The journey home, she said, had its troubles, adventures and hazards. Once she was delayed for hours at the Belgian-German border because of the lack of porters. All of them had been mobilized, she explained.

"It made us all a little sick at heart to see the many pitiful refugees at the Belgian and French borders," Mrs. Hillard said.

In the very early days of railroading, station agents were not informed just when a train would pull into a given station. The agent kept travelers informed by climbing a tower and picking out, with a telescope the train approaching miles away.

Woman Is Anxious To Fly the Atlantic

Irene Crum, Holding Best Altitude Record, Seeks Further Honors

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 27 (AP)—Irene Crum hasn't abandoned hope for making a light plane flight from Newfoundland, B. C., to Ireland in the summer of 1940, but she admits that now with the war on, it's extremely doubtful.

Miss Crum, who holds the women's altitude record for light planes, had announced the flight the past summer, and immediately started heavy work on mastering the intricacies of navigation, radio and other studies required for such a flight.

"But the war makes it all pretty indefinite," she conceded.

Continues Studies

Meanwhile, she is continuing with her aerial studies and predicts that "I'll have some use for everything I can learn if this keeps up."

Her ambition: (In event this country should become involved in the hostilities) "To fly an army plane."

"I know they probably wouldn't let me," she said.

She predicted, however, that if there was a demand for aviators for defense of the nation it would leave a great many vacancies in the staffs of the air transportation companies, making it possible women would be employed for the jobs.

Seeks Higher Ratings

Miss Crum, who spends much of her spare time at the Huntington-Ironton-Chesapeake airport under the tutelage of Lieutenant Howard Mayes, manager of the airport and a World war airman, holds an instructors rating for ground school work and is seeking higher ratings.

Marshall college students availing themselves of the opportunity to fly under the Civil Aeronautics Administration program, will take their advanced work at the Huntington airport.

Nervousness Is The Chief Cause Of Headaches

Doctor Reports Results of Cases in Large Medical Clinic

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Several years ago I conducted an investigation of all the headaches that entered a large medical clinic. Naturally, most of them were chronic or recurrent.

The simple acute headache is a very simple affair. If the patient is not subject to headaches, it invariably may be put down as the result of some form of toxicity—to a poison—either the poison of a beginning fever, sometimes absorbed in the blood from the stomach or intestines, or the hangover headache from alcoholic excess. The cure is equally easy—time, rest and aspirin.

In examining these 500 or more people who fell into this classification—it took me nearly two years—I was struck with the absence of organic disease. The medical student is always reminded that brain tumor is frequently ushered in with a headache. Yet, I detected not one single case of brain tumor in my series. Undoubtedly the nature of my material accounted for this. The brain tumor headache makes a pretty sick patient, who is spotted and put under medical care before he has to sit around a clinic. But it is curious that I did not get a single early case.

Eyestrain Common

High blood pressure and kidney disease also undoubtedly cause headache, but I got very few of these. Eyestrain was fairly common. Some we found proved to be due to focal infection; we proved it because the headaches disappeared after we removed the focal infection.

But the commonest cause of chronic headache was just plain nervousness. And my conclusions are considerably borne out by the report read at the British Medical Association meeting at Aberdeen this summer. One conclusion was that unwanted visitors cause headaches more often than physical disorders. Other causes listed were loud voices, the prospect of unwelcome tasks, dislike of other people, worry, insomnia and insults. My colleague, Mr. Runyan, whose medical writings I greatly admire, says that this list is incomplete because nothing was said about "seconds."

"Seconds" are race horses that come in second when you expected them to come in first.

I hope the impression will not gain ground that this is intended to be flippant or facetious. On the contrary, it is intended to be helpful and to show these people what is really the matter with them. In most instances their headaches are very mysterious to them, and they never understand that they are a purely nervous reflex.

In Common Speech

Yet, the connection is one that should be understood, for it has passed into common speech. A "second" horse, as we say, is a "headache." A person with a loud voice is a "headache." So is a business that is going bad, or an unwanted visitor, or an unwelcome task.

The nervous headache is likely to be described as a "pressure," or like a cap pressing down on the head, a steel band, etc.

In treatment the important thing is not to waste money on non-essentials — the teeth being elaborately fixed, or eyeglasses, etc.

Letter from England Says British Have Captured Bremen

Livingston, Mont., Sept. 27 (AP) — A letter from England to a Livingston school teacher said the Bremen, pride of the German merchant marine, was captured by the British Navy and anchored in Southampton Harbor.

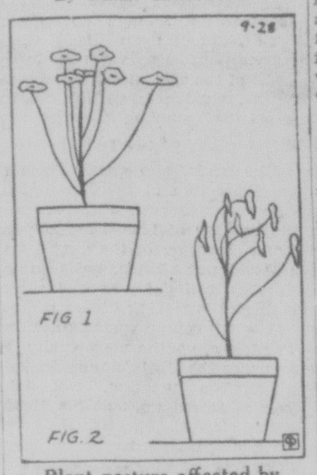
The letter, bearing no censorship marks, was written by Emma Berge of Portland, Ore., from Newcastle-on-Tyne, and received here today by her niece, Pauline Sather, a Livingston high school teacher.

(On September 21 the British Admiralty declared "rumors" that the British had captured the Bremen were "absurd.")

Miss Berge, a Portland nurse, mailed the letter September 10, a week after war was declared.

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY



Plant posture affected by light

House plants which are vacationing out of doors this summer have probably been somewhat neglected due to the press of other garden tasks. They should be brought indoors shortly, but before doing so it would be well to investigate their posture. Since all plants are sun worshippers, you will probably find that the house-plants sojourning outside have their foliage all turned in one direction, facing the sun.

The degree to which plants turn their faces to the sun is shown by the illustrations in the Garden-Graph. Figure 1 shows a nasturtium plant which has been receiving light from above. Figure 2 shows this same plant six hours later after the light above the plant had been shut out, and a light turned on from one side. The plant quickly turned its leaves to meet it.

Give your indoor plants as much light as possible this winter. Do this by rolling the window shades up to the very top. In this way the light will fall on the plants from above and thus keep the plants from acquiring bad posture by turning or leaning in the direction from which the light comes.

Cardinals Take Second Straight from Reds

St. Louis Wins 4 to 0 as McGee Hurls Fine Ball

Cincinnati Holds Two and One Half Game Lead in Flag Chase

Failure of Reds To Hit in Last Two Games Worries Cincy Fans

BY GAYLE TALBOT

Cincinnati, Sept. 27 (AP)—Fiddler Jim McGee stopped the Reds cold today, beating the leaders 4 to 0, and as a result, the scrapping St. Louis Cardinals retained their slim chance of winning the National league flag.

With four games remaining to be played by each team, including the pair of their present "crucial" series tomorrow, the Rhinelanders led by two and one-half contests. They still had a chance to clinch the pennant tomorrow, but their failure to hit in their last two games has thrown this town into a tailspin.

To make matters darker, the man the Cards licked today was heroic Bucky Walters, who had won twenty-seven victories, including his last nine in a row. The Gas-Housers made the most of their seven hits, one of which was Terry Moore's six-inch home run of the season.

More than 25,000 fans burned almost silently as the Fiddler did his stuff. The young right-hander with the blazing fast fall was in rare form. Two of the four widely-scratched blows he permitted were pinches through the infield, Walters contributing one of them.

Only once did the Reds threaten to score on him, in the third inning when an error by Stu Martin and a perfect double-play ball helped. The locals fill the bags with two out. Then Bill bore down and made Chuck McCormick pop weakly to Mize.

The Cards lost little time sailing on Bucky Walters. Clean singles by Joe Medwick, Terry Moore and Stu Martin pushed across the winning run in the second frame. They scored twice more in the fourth on a walk to Mize, Don Dadgett's double to right, an error by Ernie Lombardi and a sacrifice fly. Moore's homer, his second saftey of the game, rounded off the total.

A Few Pertinent Facts And Others About Yanks

BY JOHN LARDNER
(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, Sept. 27—Four times champions of the American League (and three times champions of the world), the New York Yankees need no introduction. Or do they? Do you know, for instance, whether Lefty Gomez prefers sawdust or boiled straw for breakfast? What is the property tax value on the gold in Arthur Fletcher's teeth? Come to think of it, it might be a good idea to analyze these conquistadores and see if they are getting away with anything they shouldn't.

We will take them one at a time, like a Cincinnati pitcher:

Frank Crosetti—the shortstop's weakness is a high pitch outside or a bowl of spaghetti in close. During his first two years with the Yankees, Crosetti never spoke a word except when he visited Tony Lazzeri's house and was heard to say "Pass the meat sauce, please." Lazzeri and Crosetti formed a closed Italian free-victualling corporation on the Yankees until a third member joined them from San Francisco. After watching Joe DiMaggio eat, Crosetti returned to shortstopping, which he does so well that Gabby Hartnett, seeing him in four games, called him the greatest in his experience. Crosetti broke up the key game of the World Series last year with a home run off Dizzy Dean.

Decade's All-Star Third Baseman

Red Rolfe—Nobody has ever seen Rolfe do anything above a whisper, yet twenty managers and coaches have voted him the all-star third baseman of this decade. Plays bridge, teaches basketball in his spare time, and is musclebound.

Charlie Keller—Former Maryland football player and recently married. American League pitches agree that another two years of study ought to reveal his batting weakness.

Joe DiMaggio—DiMaggio keeps his own official records on his own hitting, and can correct the newspaper figures at the drop of a decimal point. A great trencherman in and out of season—he paralyzes his employers with fear by spending the winter in his own restaurant, with his feet in front of the fire and his hands in the icebox—DiMaggio also likes to read with his eyes shut, while listening to band music on the radio.

Bill Dickey—A bridge player, but not guilty on all other counts. Dickey lost his temper once in twelve years and broke Carl Reynolds's jaw with a punch. Reflecting on this episode, which cost him $500, William decided not to do it again. He never has.

George Selkirk—A Canadian by birth, and a reformed wrestler. Can play the outfield well enough in a pinch, but, when "relaxing" toward the end of the season, Selkirk reminds you of his grandmother, if you ever knew her. He is extremely ticklish, and Walters and Derringer pitch to weakness by hitting him in the ribs with a change of pace ball. When Selkirk joined the Yankees, Babe Ruth discovered his failing and tortured him with tickling at every opportunity. Somebody suggested to George, a mass of muscle, that he take a punch at Ruth.

"Hit the Babe?" said Selkirk, shocked. "I couldn't do that!"

He didn't.

An Acrobatic Second Baseman

Joe Gordon—A college graduate, a concert violin player, and a trained acrobat, though he keeps his fiddling and his thinking out of the ball park and confines himself to acrobatics. Covers more ground, perhaps, than any other second baseman in history. A long hitter who shoots for the fences and hates to miss.

Babe Dahlgren—An untrained acrobat, imported at no small expense to team with Gordon on the trapeze.

Red Ruffing—Plans to devote the last years of his life to getting even for all the ball games he lost while pitching for the Boston Red Sox. When not contemplating his horrible past, Ruffing goes to the movies.

Vernon Gomez—The pride of Aragon and the toast of Castile. Aside from everything else, the hidalgo of Casa Gomez is a keen student of strategy. A few years ago, Tony Lazzeri was dropping flies intentionally for double plays, pulling hidden ball tricks, and exuding strategy all over the field. The fame of his cunning rose high. One day, with the bases empty, Gomez, who was pitching, whirled on the mound and threw the ball at Lazzeri, who caught it in self-defense. Walking in with the ball, he asked: "What in H——l did you do that for?"

"You're so smart," said Gomez. "I wanted to see what you'd make of that one."

Steve Sundra—Can outeat DiMaggio. Favors six eggs for breakfast.

Joe McCarthy—When asked if he is Joe McCarthy, says: "Maybe I am, and maybe I'm not. But don't quote me."

Wildcat Eleven Will Be One of Country's Best

Coach Waldorf Thinks Publicity Will Cost Team Two Games

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 27 (AP)—You probably have already heard that Northwestern will have one of the nation's toughest football teams this fall. Head Coach Lynn Waldorf would be the last to deny it.

Waldorf goes to football's wailing wall about as seldom as any coach in the business, but he doesn't need anyone to tell him his Wildcats are on the spot.

Northwestern has what it takes to go to town this season—manpower and experience, backed by some fine-looking sophomores, including the publicity-flooded Bill De Correvont, who practically rewrote the prep school scoring book as a Chicago high school star two years ago.

"Yes, we should be stronger this year than last," admits Waldorf. "But that isn't saying we'll win more games. Our prospects are bright from the standpoint of experience and power, but we are in a bad spot from a psychological angle.

All Games Tough

"The fact that Northwestern as a whole and De Correvont in particular have received so much publicity will make all our opponents shoot the works at us. And we have eight tough ones in a row, starting with Oklahoma. I think all the publicity will cost us at least two games."

Hahnenstein, Soper and Madsen are three of the 23 lettermen returning this fall. These veterans are so distributed that Waldorf has two lettermen for every position except right tackle.

Strong Line In Prospect

Missing from the line will be such notables as Tackle Boo Voigts and ends Cleo Diehl and Tom Eby. But another forward wall just as strong is in prospect, with centers John Haman and Paul Hiemenz, Hal Method, guard, Tackle Nich Cutlich and End Robert Daly looming as standouts.

The complete schedule:

Oct. 7—Oklahoma here; 14—Ohio State at Columbus; 21—Wisconsin here; 28—Illinois here; Nov. 4—Minnesota at Minneapolis; 11—Purdue here; 18—Notre Dame at South Bend; 25—Iowa here.

Shepherdstown High Will Open Season With Harpers Ferry

Shepherdstown, Sept. 27—Shepherdstown High School will sponsor football this season for the second consecutive year after a layoff between 1935 and 1938.

Coach Cletus Lowe will have little material to work with as only 26 candidates, 15 of which have had little or no experience, reported for the first practice September 12. He has hopes, however, of rounding out as successful a team as he turned out last season.

To date one home game and four games away have been scheduled, with the opening encounter pitting the Cardinals against the Harpers Ferry High Tigers on the latter's field Friday. This will be the high spot of the season for the Cardinals as it will be the first meeting of the former county rivals since 1935.

Coach Lowe is contemplating a light squad built around eight seniors who saw service last season. The schedule:

Sept. 29—Harpers Ferry, away.
Oct. 6—Berkeley Springs, away.
Oct. 13—Open.
Oct. 20—Capon Bridge, away.
Oct. 27—Open.
Nov. 3—St. Mary's, home.
Nov. 10—Berryville, away.

East Side Ramblers To Practice Sunday

The East Side Ramblers football squad will hold a practice session Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Golden Field.

The following persons are requested to report for practice:

E. Simpson, H. Helmick, B. Helmick, L. Moore, V. Jones, P. Jones, C. Willson, H. Fletcher, N. Valentine, Tex Tyree, Goop Lynch, Jack Golden, P. Harwarth, A. Davis, C. Morgan, C. Miller, Andy and Gene Dombosky.

All newcomers wishing to try out for the team are invited to be present, as all positions are open.

AS BILLY CONN WHIPPED BETTINA IN PITTSBURGH

Julian Can Start Veterans against Villanova Eleven

By JOSEPH F. McCARRON

Allentown, Pa., Sept. 27. (AP) — Coach Alvin Julian can put an all-veteran starting lineup on the field for Muhlenberg College in its opening game of the season with Villanova at Villanova Saturday afternoon of this week, but it is doubtful whether he will.

The reason is that some of his sophomore players have been coming along so fast in the pre-season drills here that they've made some members of last season's varsity move over. The loss of Adam Matusa, last season's captain and end; Dick Dawe, a guard; Frank Tracy, quarterback; Herb Korekno, center; Stauffer Heffner, fullback, and Johnny McKee, a tackle, by graduation, and Bill Brundzo, big fullback, by ineligibility, has left some holes in the Muhlenberg squad, but in all those positions except the end Coach Julian has seasoned replacements.

Either Pete Schneider, a product of Northampton high; Joe Podany, of Hazelton, or Perry Scott, a made-over tackle from last season, will start at Matusa's old end position, while Mike Wassokowich, a holdover end for two seasons, will be on the other wing.

Tony Zussio and Johnny Munchak, first-string tackles of last season, will be back again, as well Mal Paul and Warren Eberly, a pair of light but fast guards. Louie Derosa, picked for All - Eastern Pennsylvania Conference center last season, is back again and has able understudies in Franklin Wolf and Johnny Umlauf, the latter a center on the state championship Ashland high team of the 1936 season.

Coach Julian has a whole roomful of backfield men. Zalt Stamus, first string quarterback of last season, has two able understudies in Ernie Fellows, a trackman and the fastest player on the squad, and Nelson Graham, forward passing specialist. Holdover halfbacks from last season are Walter "Whitey" Kurowski, former Reading high school ace; Charles Burin, Andy Diefenderfer, Jimmy "Cowboy" Franklin, Abe Inman and Frank Reichwein; while Lindley Verg and Charlie Burin are holdover fullbacks.

Don Lane Bi-State's Star Second Sacker

Don Lane of Midland's Red Sox led Bi-State Baseball League second basemen in fielding during the regular season with an average of .979, according to records announced by Secretary Don Shires.

Lane made 75 putouts and had 66 assists and three errors. He finished slightly ahead of Lawrence McKenzie of Lonaconing, who made 40 putouts and as many assists with two errors for a .976 percentage.

Gil Harber of Westvaco fielded .959; Jim Downie, Frostburg, .930; Al Green, Hyndman Eagles, .927; Eddie Diehl, Cumberland, .891, and Dermot Reddy, Cumberland, .833.

Downie had the most putouts, 91, and also led in assists with 96. He also had the most errors, 14, and figured in the greatest number of double plays, 23. Second basemen's fielding records follow:

Lane, Mid.	75	66	3	12	.979

Pirates Defeat N. E. Merchants

North Enders Knocked Out of First Place in City Series

Post's Pirates knocked the North End Merchants out of first place in the City championship softball series yesterday by a score of 4 to 2. Al Weltman pitched fine ball for the winners.

Allen Sheetz's wildness and erratic support by some of his teammates cost the Merchants the game.

The Merchants scored in the first inning when Hawse beat out a bunt, followed by Cumiskey's single, a passed ball by Lapp and Hawse's steal of home when the plate was left ungarded.

Post's scored in the third on an error by Hawse, a double by Irons and an error by G. Rice and Ed Widdows sacrifice fly.

Score:

Posts	002	200	0—4	4	1
Merchants	100	001	0—2	5	4

Weltman and Lapp; Sheetz and Nave.

Mt. St. Marys To Start Veterans Against Potomac

Emmitsburg, Md., Sept. 27 (AP) — A fast football team composed of ten veterans and one newcomer will swing into action for Mt. St. Mary's college in the opening game of the season against Potomac State of Keyser, W. Va., here Saturday.

Coach Jim Draper probably will start against Potomac State a team with a line averaging 185 pounds and a backfield averaging 175 pounds.

The only freshman in the tentative lineup is Anthony Topper, 188-pound guard up from McDonough school. The other ten will be veterans back at their old positions, with the exception of co-captain Jack Bubrick, who was shifted from the line to fullback.

Draper may start Lawless at quarter and Klotz at left half in place of Asip and Stevens.

Kelly Golfers Meet Celanese Saturday

Golfers representing the Celanese Corporation of America and the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company will engage in annual combat over the Cumberland Country Club course this Saturday afternoon.

The inter-plant series started back in the middle 20's, according to local golf historians, and three trophies have been retired from competition during the skirmishing.

The first mug, The Fitch Cup, was won by Celanese linksmen and the second, the Lally Cup, went into permanent possession of the Celanese crew last season.

A new trophy, donated by Edmund S. Burke, Kelly-Springfield president, will go to the winning team this Saturday, and if the usual order prevails it will be won by Kelly representatives as the first three cups were eventually copped by the donor company's team. The Burke Cup, a one-year trophy, will become the property of Saturday's winning side.

Yankees Infield Considered Best In Baseball Today

Reds' Infield at Best Is Good but Sometimes It Falters

BY JUDSON BAILEY

New York, Sept. 27 (AP)—Sometimes the Cincinnati Reds' infield is torrid and sometimes it's horrid but there never is a day that the World Champion Yankees' first line of defense isn't the best in baseball.

It's the Maginot line of the diamond and the margin of New York's superiority in the World Series opening at Yankee Stadium next Wednesday.

Babe Dahlgren is performing plays around first base that the great Gehrig never even imagined and, with young Joe Gordon at second, gives the Yankees the spryest, tightest right side they ever had.

Sluggers like Gehrig in his prime don't bloom twice in one season or several seasons, but Dahlgren nonetheless is a threat at the plate. He has hit fifteen home runs and batted in eighty-eight tallies—enough to carry his weight in anybody's batting order.

Gordon is the miracle man of the Yanks' defense—the comer tabbed as potentially greater than Charley Gehringer. He can go in any direction and on one play may take a fly in short right and the next spear a hopping grounder back of second. If it's a pop-up anywhere within commuting distance for Gordon the rest of the boys let him take it. He never misses.

The left side is nearly as stout and on any basis of consideration far in front of the foe.

Frank Crosetti, whose only fielding weakness is over anxiety, has only made twenty-four errors at shortstop all season and cancelled most of them with a double play in the same inning. Red Rolfe has been even more impregnable in the hot corner. By all measurments the outstanding third baseman of the year, he has fielded .961 and ranked among the American League's leading hitters.

He was the only player in the majors to get more than 200 hits prior to this week and bolstered his 329 batting average with fourteen home runs and forty-six doubles.

The Reds' infield at its best will give the Yanks or any other team plenty of grievances. The figures, which never are supposed to lie, will even show advantages for Cincinnati here and there. But the Reds sometimes blow and the champions never do.

Maryland Scrimmages George Washington

College Park, Md., Sept. 27 (AP)—Practice scrimmages against a George Washington University team brought practically all the Maryland football squad into action yesterday.

Neither team scored as Maryland warmed up for the Hampden-Sidney game Saturday, but each closed on its opponent's goal at one time or another. Maryland matched the Washington, D. C., team in running yardage and gained even more in forward passing. Pershing Mondorff and sophomore Earle Duvall handled most of the Maryland aerial attack.

Joe Murphy, Mondorff, Frank Skotnicki and Milton Lumsden were the starting varsity backfield, with Duvall, John Boyda and Bernie Ulman as replacements. Vern N. Miller and Jack Warfield, halfbacks, did some work for the second team.

Parker-Lisanti Booked To Fight Here October 9

Seven Bouts Arranged for Show at Queen City Hotel Ballroom

Seven bouts have been scheduled, with one or two more to be added, for the Shamrock Athletic Clubs' next boxing show to be held at the Queen City Hotel Ballroom, Monday, October 9.

In the feature bout of the evening "Tony" Lisanti, South Cumberland featherweight puncher, will get his chance to prove his claim to the County 126 pound championship, when he faces the veteran campaigner Delton Parker. Lisanti challenged the winner of the Delton Parker and Ralph Immel fight here on one of the fight cards a month or so ago. Parker was declared the winner after five hard fought rounds.

Parker accepted the challenge, and was boastful to say that he not only would fight Lisanti, but would knock him out. Parker has proven on numerous occasions, that he is just about all one could ask for when it comes to fisticuffs, and will be out to make good his boasts when he faces the hard punching Lisanti.

Bill Niland said last night that he has had many requests for this battle, and the local rivalry should bring the fans out in droves for the first boxing matches ever to be held at the Hotel Ballroom.

"Tony Lisanti has never been knocked off his feet in over thirty fights, but has sent many an opponent into the land of "sweet dreams" with that deadly right hook he possesses.

There are many fans along the Virginia Ave. section who will back up "Tony's" claim to the "King" of the local featherweights. This bout has been hanging fire for some time, and Promoter Niland feels that the time is now ripe for the meeting of these two belligerents.

Other bouts completed indicate that this card shapes up as the best amateur boxing card ever arranged for the Tri-State area.

"Kid" Buckwheat, 155 lbs., Cumberland, takes on the hard-hitting "Fats" Ogle, "Gene" Kelley's protege, from Greenspring, W. Va.

"Red" Riley who scored a knockout victory over Harry Stewart on the last card held here takes on Lewis Twigg, 147 lbs., South Cumberland.

"Curley" Hughes, former All Navy champion, will tackle the veteran, Armand Franchi, 120 lbs., in one of the feature five round bouts.

John Booth, 138 lbs. vs. "Gene" Kiddy, 138 lbs., of the Devon Club.

Bill Wiseman, 185 lbs., Devon A. C. heavy, faces Joe Zeliniskey, Frostburgh battler.

Bill Corbin, 128 lbs., Greenspring, W. Va., vs. "Chink" Davis, 127 lbs., Cumberland.

Archibald-Jeffra Meet Tonight in 15 Round Fight

Washington, Sept. 27. (AP)—Joey Archibald, featherweight champion of the world, and Harry Jeffra, the challenger, will weigh in here tomorrow for their fifteen-round fight with Archibald a slight favorite.

Penny Leonard, retired lightweight champion, has been approved by the district boxing association to referee the battle.

The National Boxing Association announced that the next title bout to gain its approval would have to be a contest between the winner of the Archibald-Jeffra battle, and Petey Scalzo or the winner of the Scalzo-Simon Chavez go.

Archibald comes from Pawtucket, R. I., Jeffra from Baltimore.

Cardinals Take Second Straight from Reds

St. Louis Wins 1 to 0 as McGee Hurls Fine Ball

Cincinnati Holds Two and One Half Game Lead in Flag Chase

Failure of Reds To Hit in Last Two Games Worries Cincy Fans

BY GAYLE TALBOT

Cincinnati, Sept. 27 (AP)—Fiddler Jim McGee stopped the Reds cold today, beating the leaders 4 to 0, and as a result, the scrapping St. Louis Cardinals retained their slim chance of winning the National league flag.

With four games remaining to be played by each team, including the windup of their present "crucial" series tomorrow, the Rhinelanders led by two and one-half contests. They still had a chance to clinch the pennant tomorrow, but their failure to hit in their last two games has thrown this town into a tailspin.

To make matters darker, the man the Cards licked today was heroic Bucky Walters, who had won twenty-seven victories, including his last seven in a row. The Gas-Housers made the most of their seven hits, one of which was Terry Moore's six-teenth home run of the season.

More than 25,000 fans burned almost silently as the Fiddler did his job. The young right-hander with his blazing fast fall was in rare form. Two of the four widely-scattered blows he permitted were pitches through the infield, Walters contributing one of them.

Only once did the Reds threaten to score on him, in the third inning when an error by Stu Martin and a perfect double-play ball helped the locals fill the bags with two out. Then Bill bore down and made Ernie McCormick pop weakly to Walters.

The Cards lost little time sailing on Walters. Clean singles by Joe Medwick, Terry Moore and Stu Martin pushed across the winning run in the second frame. They scored twice more in the fourth on a walk to Mize, Don Dadgett's double to right, an error by Ernie Lombardi and a sacrifice fly. Mize's homer, his second saftey of the game, rounded off the totals.

A Few Pertinent Facts And Others About Yanks

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, Sept. 27—Four times champions of the American League (and three times champions of the world), the New York Yankees need no introduction. Or do they? Do you know, for instance, whether Lefty Gomez prefers sawdust or boiled straw for breakfast? What is the property tax value on the gold in Arthur Fletcher's teeth? Come to think of it, it might be a good idea to analyze these conquistadores and see if they are getting away with anything they shouldn't.

We will take them one at a time, like a Cincinnati pitcher:

Frank Crosetti—the shortstop's weakness is a high pitch outside or a bowl of spaghetti in close. During his first two years with the Yankees, Crosetti never spoke a word except when he visited Tony Lazzeri's house and was heard to say "Pass the meat sauce, please." Lazzeri and Crosetti formed a closed Italian free-victualling corporation on the Yankees until a third member joined them from San Francisco. After watching Joe DiMaggio eat, Crosetti returned to shortstopping, which he does so well that Gabby Hartnett, seeing him in four games, called him the greatest in his experience. Crosetti broke up the key game of the World Series last year with a home run off Dizzy Dean.

Decade's All-Star Third Baseman

Red Rolfe—Nobody has ever seen Rolfe do anything above a whisper, yet twenty managers and coaches have voted him the all-star third baseman of this decade. Plays bridge, teaches basketball in his spare time, and is musclebound.

Charlie Keller—Former Maryland football player and recently married, American League pitches agree that another two years of study ought to reveal his batting weakness.

Joe DiMaggio—DiMaggio keeps his own official records on his own hitting, and can correct the newspaper figures at the drop of a decimal point. A great trencherman in and out of season—he paralyzes his employers with fear by spending the winter in his own restaurant, with his feet in front of the fire and his hands in the icebox—DiMaggio also likes to read with his eyes shut, while listening to band music on the radio.

Bill Dickey—A bridge player, but not guilty on all other counts. Dickey lost his temper once in twelve years and broke Carl Reynolds's jaw with a punch. Reflecting on this episode, which cost him $500, William decided not to do it again. He never has.

George Selkirk—A Canadian by birth, and a reformed wrestler. Can play the outfield well enough in a pinch, but, when "relaxing" toward the end of the season, Selkirk reminds you of his grandmother, if you ever knew her. He is extremely ticklish, and Walters and Derringer pitch to weakness by hitting him in the ribs with a change of pace ball. When Selkirk joined the Yankees, Babe Ruth discovered his failing and tortured him with tickling at every opportunity. Somebody suggested to George, a mass of muscle, that he take a punch at Ruth.

"Hit the Babe?" said Selkirk, shocked. "I couldn't do that!"

An Acrobatic Second Baseman

Joe Gordon—A college graduate, a concert violin player, and a trained acrobat, though he keeps his fiddling and his thinking out of the ball park and confines himself to acrobatics. Covers more ground, perhaps, than any other second baseman in history. A long hitter who shoots for the fences and hates to miss.

Babe Dahlgren—An untrained acrobat, imported at no small expense to team with Gordon on the trapeze.

Red Ruffing—Plans to devote the last years of his life to getting even for all the ball games he lost while pitching for the Boston Red Sox. When not contemplating his horrible past, Ruffing goes to the movies.

Vernon Gomez—The pride of Aragon and the toast of Castile. Aside from everything else, the hidalgo of Casa Gomez is a keen student of strategy. A few years ago, Tony Lazzeri was dropping flies intentionally for double plays, pulling hidden ball tricks, and exuding strategy all over the field. The fame of his cunning rose high. One day, with the bases empty, Gomez, who was pitching, whirled on the mound and threw the ball at Lazzeri, who caught it in self-defense. Walking in with the ball, he asked: "What in H——l did you do that for?"

"You're so smart," said Gomez. "I wanted to see what you'd make of that one."

Coach Waldorf Thinks Publicity Will Cost Team Two Games

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 27 (AP)—You probably have already heard that Northwestern will have one of the nation's toughest football teams this fall. Head Coach Lynn Waldorf would be the last to deny it.

Waldorf goes to football's wailing wall about as seldom as any coach in the business, but he doesn't need anyone to tell him his Wildcats are on the spot.

Northwestern has what it takes to go to town this season—manpower and experience, backed by some fine-looking sophomores, including the publicity-flooded Bill De Correvont, who practically rewrote the prep school scoring book as a Chicago high school star two years ago.

"Yes, we should be stronger this year than last," admits Waldorf. "But that isn't saying we'll win more games. Our prospects are bright from the standpoint of experience and power, but we are in a bad spot from a psychological angle.

All Games Tough

"The fact that Northwestern as a whole and De Correvont in particular have received so much publicity will make all our opponents shoot the works at us. And we have eight tough ones in a row, starting with Oklahoma. I think all the publicity will cost us at least two games."

Hahnenstein, Soper and Madsen are three of the 23 lettermen returning this fall. These veterans are so distributed that Waldorf has two lettermen for every position except right tackle.

Strong Line In Prospect

Missing from the line will be such notables as Tackle Boo Voigts and ends Cleo Diehl and Tom Eby. But another forward wall just as strong is in prospect, with centers John Haman and Paul Hiemenz, Hal Method, guard, Tackle Nich Cutlich and End Robert Daly looming as standouts.

The complete schedule:

Oct. 7—Oklahoma here; 14—Ohio State at Columbus; 21—Wisconsin here; 28—Illinois here; Nov. 4—Minnesota at Minneapolis; 11—Purdue here; 18—Notre Dame at South Bend; 25—Iowa here.

Shepherdstown High Will Open Season With Harpers Ferry

Shepherdstown, Sept. 27—Shepherdstown High School will sponsor football this season for the second consecutive year after a layoff between 1935 and 1938.

Coach Cletus Lowe will have little material to work with as only 26 candidates, 15 of which have had little or no experience, reported for the first practice September 12. He has hopes, however, of rounding out as successful a team as he turned out last season.

To date one home game and four games away have been scheduled, with the opening encounter pitting the Cardinals against the Harpers Ferry High Tigers on the latter's field Friday. This will be the high spot of the season for the Cardinals as it will be the first meeting of the former county rivals since 1935.

Coach Lowe is contemplating a light squad built around eight seniors who saw service last season. The schedule:

Sept. 29—Harpers Ferry, away.
Oct. 6—Berkeley Springs, away.
Oct. 13—Open.
Oct. 20—Capon Bridge, away.
Oct. 27—Open.
Nov. 3—St. Mary's, home.
Nov. 10—Berryville, away.

East Side Ramblers To Practice Sunday

The East Side Ramblers football squad will hold a practice session Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Golden Field.

The following persons are requested to report for practice:

E. Simpson, H. Helmick, B. Helmick, L. Moore, V. Jones, P. Jones, C. Willson, H. Fletcher, N. Valentine, Tex Tyree, Goop Lynch, Jack Golden, P. Harwarth, A. Davis, C. Morgan, C. Miller, Andy and Gene Dombosky.

All newcomers wishing to try out for the team are invited to be present, as all positions are open.

By JOSEPH F. McCARRON

Allentown, Pa., Sept. 27. (AP) — Coach Alvin Julian can put an all-veteran starting lineup on the field for Muhlenberg College in its opening game of the season with Villanova at Villanova Saturday afternoon of this week, but it is doubtful whether he will.

The reason is that some of his sophomore players have been coming along so fast in the pre-season drills here that they've made some members of last season's varsity move over. The loss of Adam Matusa, last season's captain and end; Dick Dawe, a guard; Frank Tracy, quarterback; Herb Korekno, center; Stauffer Heffner, fullback, and Johnny McKee, a tackle, by graduation, and Bill Brundzo, big fullback, by ineligibility, has left some holes in the Muhlenberg squad, but in all those positions except the end Coach Julian has seasoned replacements.

Either Pete Schneider, a product of Northampton high; Joe Podany, of Hazelton, or Perry Scott, a made-over tackle from last season, will start at Matusa's old end position, while Mike Wassokowich, a holdover end for two seasons, will be on the other wing.

Tony Zussio and Johnny Munchak, first-string tackles of last season, will be back again, as well Mal Paul and Warren Eberly, a pair of light but fast guards. Louie Derosa, picked for All - Eastern Pennsylvania Conference center last season, is back again and has able understudies in Franklin Wolf and Johnny Umlauf, the latter a center on the state championship Ashland high team of the 1936 season.

Coach Julian has a whole roomful of backfield men. Zalt Stamus, first string quarterback of last season, has two able understudies in Ernie Fellows, a trackman and the fastest player on the squad, and Nelson Graham, forward passing specialist. Holdover halfbacks from last season are Walter "Whitey" Kurowski, former Reading high school ace; Charles Burin, Andy Diefenderfer, Jimmy "Cowboy" Franklin, Abe Inman and Frank Reichwein; while Lindley Verg and Charlie Burin are holdover fullbacks.

Don Lane Bi-State's Star Second Sacker

Don Lane of Midland's Red Sox led Bi-State Baseball League second basemen in fielding during the regular season with an average of .979, according to records announced by Secretary Don Shires.

Lane made 75 putouts and had 66 assists and three errors. He finished slightly ahead of Lawrence McKenzie of Lonaconing, who made 40 putouts and as many assists with two errors for a .976 percentage.

Gil Harber of Westvaco fielded .959; Jim Downie, Frostburg, .930; Al Green, Hyndman Eagles, .927; Eddie Diehl, Cumberland, .891, and Dermot Reddy, Cumberland, .833.

Downie had the most putouts, 91, and also led in assists with 96. He also had the most errors, 14, and figured in the greatest number of double plays, 23. Second baseman's fielding records follow:

Lane, Mid.	75	66	3	12	.979
L. McKenzie, Lon.	40	40	2	8	.976

Pirates Defeat N. E. Merchants

North Enders Knocked Out of First Place in City Series

Post's Pirates knocked the North End Merchants out of first place in the City championship softball series yesterday by a score of 4 to 2. Al Weltman pitched fine ball for the winners.

Allen Sheetz's wildness and erratic support by some of his teammates cost the Merchants the game.

The Merchants scored in the first inning when Hawse beat out a bunt, followed by Cumiskey's single, a passed ball by Lapp and Hawse's steal of home when the plate was left ungarded.

Post's scored in the third on an error by Hawse, a double by Irons and an error by G. Rice and Ed Widdows sacrifice fly.

Score:

Posts	002	200	0—4
Merchants	100	001	0—2

Weltman and Lapp; Sheets and Nave.

Mt. St. Marys To Start Veterans Against Potomac

Emmitsburg, Md., Sept. 27 (AP) — A fast football team composed of ten veterans and one newcomer will swing into action for Mt. St. Mary's college in the opening game of the season against Potomac State of Keyser, W. Va., here Saturday.

Coach Jim Draper probably will start against Potomac State a team with a line averaging 185 pounds and a backfield averaging 175 pounds.

The only freshman in the tentative lineup is Anthony Topper, 188-pound guard up from McDonough school. The other ten will be veterans back at their old positions, with the exception of co-captain Jack Bubrick, who was shifted from the line to fullback.

Kelly Golfers Meet Celanese Saturday

Golfers representing the Celanese Corporation of America and the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company will engage in annual combat over the Cumberland Country Club course this Saturday afternoon.

The inter-plant series started back in the middle 20's, according to local golf historians, and three trophies have been retired from competition during the skirmishing.

The first mug, The Fitch Cup, was won by Celanese linksmen and the second, the Lally Cup, went into permanent possession of the Celanese crew last season.

A new trophy, donated by Edmund S. Burke, Kelly-Springfield president, will go to the winning team this Saturday, and if the usual order prevails it will be won by Kelly representatives as the first three cups were eventually copped by the donor company's team. The Burke Cup, a one-year trophy, will become the property of Saturday's winning side.

Yankees Infield Considered Best In Baseball Today

BY JUDSON BAILEY

New York, Sept. 27 (AP)—Sometimes the Cincinnati Reds' infield is torrid and sometimes it's horrid but there never is a day that the World Champion Yankees' first line of defense isn't the best in baseball.

It's the Maginot line of the diamond and the margin of New York's superiority in the World Series opening at Yankee Stadium next Wednesday.

Babe Dahlgren is performing plays around first base that the great Gehrig never even imagined and, with young Joe Gordon at second, gives the Yankees the spryest, tightest right side they ever had.

Sluggers like Gehrig in his prime don't bloom twice in one season or several seasons, but Dahlgren nonetheless is a threat at the plate. He has hit fifteen home runs and batted in eighty-eight tallies—enough to carry his weight in anybody's batting order.

Gordon is the miracle man of the Yanks' defense—the comer tabbed as potentially greater than Charley Gehringer. He can go in any direction and on one play may take a fly in short right and the next spear a hopping grounder back of second. If it's a pop-up anywhere within commuting distance for Gordon the rest of the boys let him take it. He never misses.

The left side is nearly as stout and on any basis of consideration, far in front of the foe.

Frank Crosetti, whose only fielding weakness is over anxiety, has only made twenty-four errors at shortstop all season and cancelled most of them with a double play in the same inning. Red Rolfe has been even more impregnable in the hot corner. By all measurments the outstanding third baseman of the year, he has fielded .961 and ranked among the American League's leading hitters.

He was the only player in the majors to get more than 200 hits prior to this week and bolstered his .329 batting average with fourteen home runs and forty-six doubles.

The Reds' infield at its best will give the Yanks or any other team plenty of grievances. The figures, which never are supposed to lie, will even show advantages for Cincinnati here and there. But the Reds sometimes blow and the champions never do.

Maryland Scrimmages George Washington

College Park, Md., Sept. 27 (AP)—Practice scrimmages against a George Washington University team brought practically all the Maryland football squad into action yesterday.

Neither team scored as Maryland warmed up for the Hampden-Sidney game Saturday, but each closed on its opponent's goal at one time or another. Maryland matched the Washington, D. C., team in running yardage and gained even more in forward passing. Pershing Mondorff and sophomore Earle Duvall handled most of the Maryland aerial attack.

Joe Murphy, Mondorff, Frank Skotnicki and Milton Lumsden were the starting varsity backfield, with Duvall, John Boyda and Bernie Ulman as replacements. Vern N. Miller and Jack Warfield, halfbacks, did some work for the second team.

Parker-Lisanti Booked To Fight Here October 9

Seven bouts have been scheduled, with one or two more to be added, for the Shamrock Athletic Clubs' next boxing show to be held at the Queen City Hotel Ballroom, Monday, October 9.

In the feature bout of the evening "Tony" Lisanti, South Cumberland featherweight puncher, will get his chance to prove his claim to the County 126 pound championship, when he faces the veteran campaigner Delton Parker. Lisanti challenged the winner of the Delton Parker and Ralph Immel fight here on one of the fight cards a month or so ago. Parker was declared the winner after five hard fought rounds.

Parker accepted the challenge, and was boastful to say that he not only would fight Lisanti, but would knock him out. Parker has proven on numerous occasions, that he is just about all one could ask for when it comes to fisticuffs, and will be out to make good his boasts when he faces the hard punching Lisanti.

Bill Niland said last night that he has had many requests for this battle, and the local rivalry should bring the fans out in droves, for the first boxing matches ever to be held at the Hotel Ballroom.

"Tony Lisanti has never been knocked off his feet in over thirty fights, but has sent many an opponent into the land of "sweet dreams" with that deadly right hook he possesses.

There are many fans along the Virginia Ave, section who will back up "Tony's" claim to the "King" of the local featherweights. This bout has been hanging fire for some time, and Promoter Niland feels that the time is now ripe for the meeting of these two belligerents.

Other bouts completed indicate that this card shapes up as the best amateur boxing card ever arranged for the Tri-State area.

"Kid" Buckwheat, 155 lbs., Cumberland, takes on the hard-hitting "Fats" Ogle, "Gene" Kelley's protege, from Greenspring, W. Va.

"Red" Riley who scored a knockout victory over Harry Stewart on the last card held here takes on Lewis Twigg, 147 lbs., South Cumberland.

"Curley" Hughes, former All Navy champion, will tackle the veteran, Armand Franchi, 120 lbs., in one of the feature five round bouts.

John Booth, 138 lbs. vs. "Gene" Kiddy, 138 lbs., of the Devon Club.

Bill Wiseman, 185 lbs., Devon A. C. heavy, faces Joe Zeliniskey, Frostburgh battler.

Bill Corbin, 128 lbs., Greenspring, W. Va., vs. "Chink" Davis, 127 lbs., Cumberland.

Archibald-Jeffra Meet Tonight in 15 Round Fight

Washington, Sept. 27. (AP)—Joey Archibald, featherweight champion of the world, and Harry Jeffra, the challenger, will weigh in here tomorrow for their fifteen-round fight with Archibald a slight favorite.

Benny Leonard, retired lightweight champion, has been approved by the district boxing association to referee the battle.

The National Boxing Association announced that the next title bout to gain its approval would have to be a contest between the winner of the Archibald-Jeffra battle, and Petey Scalzo or the winner of the Scalzo-Simon Chavez go.

Archibald comes from Pawtucket, R. I., Jeffra from Baltimore.

Cubs Win Two From Pirates; Climb to Third

Tenth Inning Rallies in Both Games Staged by Chicago

Pittsburgh, Sept. 27 (AP)—The Chicago Cubs climbed into third place in the National League today by slapping down the Pittsburgh Pirates twice in a wild-hitting double header, 9 to 8, and 9 to 5, each time with tenth inning battles.

The double triumph left the Cubs two percentage points ahead of the idle Brooklyn Dodgers.

Hank Lieber's double and singles by Glenn Russell and Bobby Mattick gave the Bruins two runs and victory in the first contest. Pitcher Bill Swift collapsed in the tenth of the second game, yielding five hits and four runs. It was the seventh straight loss for Pittsburgh.

SONG OF THE YANKEES

We caught the truth from the bat of Ruth
And the bludgeon that Gehrig swung.
We took our hunch from the killing punch
When most of the tribe were young.
We know the worth of the pitching arm,
We know what the fielders mean,
But we'll stake our cast on the home-run blast
That carries beyond the screen.

We know the thrill of the old game's skill
We know of the inside art.
We give our clients their share of science,
Including the fighting heart.
But when it comes to the showdown, pal,
To tapping the old home plate,
We'll take the crash of the Walloping Ash
And leave all the rest to fate.

McCarthy vs. the National League

New York, Sept. 27—The struggle between Joe McCarthy and the National League began seven years ago when Joe was so freshly out of the National League himself that he probably knew more players in it than he did in the American League. Joe and the National League have hooked up four times and the league has yet to win a decision—and now they are getting ready to tangle again—and again the betting is that Joe will finish on top.

Released as manager of the Cubs just as the 1930 season ended and immediately signed by the Yankees, it took Joe one year to settle himself here. That year the Yanks finished second. In 1932 they won and moved against the Cubs in the World Series.

The result of that series was almost complete revenge for Joe. The Yankees won in four straight games, beating Guy Bush, Lon Warneke, and Charlie Root—Bush having started the first and last games. For the Yankees, Charlie Ruffing, Vernon Gomez, George Pipgras and Wilcy Moore turned back the Cub hitters, Moore relieving Johnny Allen in the final game.

That was a great series for the Yankee hitters. Gehrig hit .529, Dickey .437, Combs .375 and Sewell and Ruth each hit .333. That was the series in which the Babe, with two strikes on him, called his shot on Root and hit a home run over the fence in right center.

Joe was all even with Chicago when that series was over — save in one detail; Rogers Hornsby, who had succeeded him as manager of the Cubs, hadn't lasted long enough to oppose him in that series. That was the only circumstance that marred his revenge.

There was a lapse of four years in hostilities between Joe and the league and then they hooked up in 1936, with the Giants representing the league. Joe had to tussle for this one, the Giants going to six games before they were beaten down. Twice — once behind Carl Hubbell and again behind Hal Schumacher — they stalled the Yankee attack and went on to win. In another game, with Fred Fitzsimmons pitching, they lost a heartbreaker, Bump Hadley beating Fitz, 2 to 1 — the game turning on a high-bounding ball that got away from Fitz, probably the best fielding pitcher in baseball.

Gomez won two games in that series and Hadley and Pearson the others, while Ruffing and Pat Malone were beaten. Again the Yankee bats thundered a couple of times. Joe's troops won one game 18 to 4 and another 13 to 5. The Babe had passed from the Yankee array by this time but Joe DiMaggio had come swinging up from the Coast League and Gehrig and Dickey and Lazzeri were still pounding along.

In 1937 the Giants furnished the opposition again — but this time McCarthy turned the pressure on a little harder and the Giants were flattened in five games. Only Carl Hubbell could win for the Giants. He was beaten the first time out but he came back to win the fourth game, taking a decision over Hadley. Meanwhile Gomez, Ruffing and Pearson had won for the Yanks and Gomez, in a return engagement, closed out the series by getting the nod over Cliff Melton.

Lazzeri, winding up his days at the Stadium — he took off his Yankee uniform for the last time after the last game — led his crew in hitting with a mark of .400. Red Rolfe hit .300 and so did Myril Hoag. Gehrig hit .294 and DiMaggio .273. The main surprise, although few noticed it at the time because of the Yankees' very convincing victory, was a .211 batting average for Bill Dickey.

Easiest of All

Last year the challenge came from Chicago and Joe swung West for another triumph — the easiest of all. He had beaten the Cubs four in a row in 1932 but there were times during that series when it seemed the Cubs might possibly win. Last year the Cubs were licked before they started.

Only Gabby Hartnett and Dizzy Dean really stood up against the Yanks, and they weren't nearly enough. Dean gave them a hand-to-hand fight for seven innings and then they crushed him on home runs by Frank Crosetti and DiMaggio. Bill Lee and Clay Bryant —with Lee trying twice — were easy. Joe used only three pitchers, starting and finishing with Ruffing, with Gomez and Pearson in between. Joe Gordon, by way of climaxing his first year in the big show, hit .400. So did Dickey. Gehrig, playing in his last series, although nobody knew it then, hit .286.

Now Joe is ready to move on the National League again. He has the old reliable Gomez-Ruffing-Hadley-Pearson pitching combination to hurl into the fray, plus Marius Russo, rapidly taking his place among the top left-handers of the game. Plus Dickey and Gordon and DiMaggio and Rolfe and the rest of that thumping crew. And, as I said before, the betting is on Joe again.

Plasman Is Back

Chicago, Sept 27—Dick Plasman, Chicago Bears end, has been designated by assistant coach Harold E. "Red" Grange as football's No. 1 comeback for the 1939 season. Plasman, a former Vanderbilt star, was the victim of a freak accident last season, which saw him crash into a concrete wall, just beyond the end zone at Wrigley Field, while attempting to spear a forward pass.

He suffered compound fractures of both wrists. It was feared that the accident would terminate his football career, but he is back again this year playing regularly and Grange asserts he is the most improved player on the squad.

Henry Is Leading Hitter in Softball Playoff Series

Batting and pitching records for the recent South End Booster Softball League championship series, which Keegan's Gassers won with three consecutive victories, show that Mel Henry of Post's Pirates was the leading hitter with an average of 667 for six times at bat and Twigg of the Gassers led pitchers with three straight triumphs.

Second in batting was Joe Wagner of Candy Kitchen with .571 while Orndorff of Candy Kitchen and Hoyle of the Kitcheners tied for third with .500. Hahn of Keegan's was fifth with .400.

Mel Henry and Ed Widdows and Billy Stevenson of Post's and Hoyle of Candy Kitchen each had three hits in one game. Widdows drove out two doubles and batted in four runs in one contest while Stevenson scored three times in one battle.

Mel Henry made four straight hits over a two-game stretch. Candy Kitchen had ten runners left on base in one game. John Spoltore of the Kitcheners hit for the most bases in one clash, six, and Bob Doak, Widdows, Derl Keller and Mel Henry, Posts; Ed Diehl of the Gassers and Harold Fraley of Candy Kitchen each stole one base.

Fifty-one boys took part in the series. The above records will be recognized as such as the playoff this year was the first in South End League history.

Twigg scored two shutouts in winning three games. Meeks of Lacys Delicatets had one no-run battle. Hoyle had five wild pitchers and Weltman two.

Candy Kitchen compiled the best team-batting average with .322. Posts Candy Kitchen and the Gassers each collected four doubles, Posts and Lacy's each had one triple and Candy Kitchen and Keegan's each had one home run with John Spoltore hitting for the circuit for the Kitcheners and "Hezie" Hahn for the Gassers. Widdows, Dient of Keegan's and Wagner of Candy Kitchen each had two doubles and Mel Henry and Mel Rankin, the latter of the Delicatets, accounted for the two triples.

Post's led in stolen bases with four, Keegan's in sacrifices with seven and Post's in men left on bases with 22. Individual and team batting and pitching records for the series follow:

Lewis Playing Guard

Cleveland, Sept. 30—Art "Pappy" Lewis, assistant playing coach of the Cleveland Rams, has been shifted from tackle to guard, Head Coach Earl "Dutch" Clark announces. Lewis suggested the shift because the Rams' guards have failed to perform up to National Football League standards.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Sept. 27 (AP)—One of our favorite football teams starts its fall plowing this week, and partly from force of habit we are going to pick it to win. We picked it all last season and were doing all right until the Tennessee Vols also picked it in the orange bowl. They picked it to pieces.

The team is Oklahoma, and we have a sentimental interest in it as we have watched it grow more or less from a pup. It is just reaching maturity, and we have the word direct from Jumbo Tom Stidham, the coach, that by the end of the season the Sooners "will likely be almost as strong as last year".

Considering the tendency of football coaches to refer to an oak tree as an acorn, if it is in their back yard, Stidham's statement might be taken as a warning, although we do wish the Sooners hadn't scheduled Northwestern for their second game. And maybe not S. M. U. for the first. There's too much green in the Oklahoma landscape right now.

"Physically, we have much better reserves than last year, when our reserve strength was a myth", Stidham says. "However, many of the reserves are unschooled and we won't be able to cash in on them until they acquire experience.

It's quite a gamble to like the Sooners over S. M. U., as it looks like anybody's ball game Saturday. But we'll take a chance on the Oklahomans, knowing them as we do.

In fact, it's quite a gamble to pick any team in an opening game, as there may not be anything left of a 1938 bombshell but the shell.

However, because we enjoy swinging about from limb to limb, here is what we expect to happen this week:

Kansas to beat Drake, Tennessee to beat North Carolina State, and Denver to beat Iowa State Friday.

Notre Dame to take a close one from Purdue, Indiana to get some overdue revenge against Nebraska, Louisiana State to get back at Mississippi for that surprise licking of last year, U. S. C. to take Oregon, Washington to take Pittsburgh (and we'll take aspirin after trying to figure out that one), Rice to beat Vanderbilt, Missouri to out-pass Colorado, Stanford to start off right against Oregon State, Texas to win over Florida, and Texas A. & M. to out-power Centenary, all on Saturday.

And just to show we're not afraid of the tough ones, we'll put in the Fordham-Waynesburg game. We'll take Fordham before retiring.

Cubs Win Two From Pirates; Climb to Third

Tenth Inning Rallies in Both Games Staged by Chicago

Pittsburgh, Sept. 27 (AP)—The Chicago Cubs climbed into third place in the National League today by slapping down the Pittsburgh Pirates twice in a wild-hitting double header, 9 to 8, and 9 to 5, each time with tenth inning battles.

The double triumph left the Cubs two percentage points ahead of the idle Brooklyn Dodgers.

Hank Lieber's double and singles by Glenn Russell and Bobby Mattick gave the Bruins two runs and victory in the first contest. Pitcher Bill Swift collapsed in the tenth of the second game, yielding five hits and four runs. It was the seventh straight loss for Pittsburgh.

Berkeley High Opens Football Fund Drive

Berkeley Spring, W. Va., Sept. 27—With the lid-lifter set for Saturday afternoon against Handley at Winchester, Va., members of the Berkeley Springs High football squad this week started a drive for funds to secure better equipment.

Representatives of the Indians attended meetings of Morgan County Kiwanis Club and the Young Men's Business Club this week, explained the situation and offered for sale season tickets to home games. From the proceeds of the advance sale Coach Paul "Moose" Hodges will attempt to have his small squad well equipped.

Three home games have been scheduled. Shepherdstown will provide the opposition in the first one October 6. Ridgeley (W. Va.) High will come here November 3, and on November 10 the Indians will be hosts to Harpers Ferry. As esason tickets call for a total of four games, the other contest will probably be with an Alumni eleven.

Coach Morley Jennings

Once the property of the Washington Senators' baseball team, Morley Jennings, coach of Baylor university's football team, forsook the diamond sport to devote most of his time to football and become one of the leading coaches in the United States.

Dean of Southwest conference coaches in point of service, Jennings is beginning his 14th season at the Baptist school at Waco, Tex.

Born at Albion, Mich., in 1890, Jennings received his first football training at a small Albion school. He lettered four years in the sport and then went to Mississippi A. & M., graduating in 912.

An outstanding baseball player in college, Jennings played for several years at Minneapolis.

His first college football coaching job was at Ouachita college in Arkansas where he stayed until 1925 when he went to Baylor.

SONG OF THE YANKEES

We caught the truth from the bat of Ruth
And the bludgeon that Gehrig swung.
We took our hunch from the killing punch
When most of the tribe were young.
We know the worth of the pitching arm,
We know what the fielders mean,
But we'll stake our cast on the home-run blast
That carries beyond the screen.

We know the thrill of the old game's skill
We know of the inside art,
We give our clients their share of science,
Including the fighting heart.
But when it comes to the showdown, pal,
To tapping the old home plate,
We'll take the crash of the Walloping Ash

McCarthy vs. the National League

New York, Sept. 27—The struggle between Joe McCarthy and the National League began seven years ago when Joe was so freshly out of the National League himself that he probably knew more players in it than he did in the American League. Joe and the National League have hooked up four times and the league has yet to win a decision—and now they are getting ready to tangle again—and again the betting is that Joe will finish on top.

Released as manager of the Cubs just as the 1930 season ended and immediately signed by the Yankees, it took Joe one year to settle himself here. That year the Yanks finished second. In 1932 they won and moved against the Cubs in the World Series.

The result of that series was almost complete revenge for Joe. The Yankees won in four straight games, beating Guy Bush, Lon Warneke, and Charlie Root—Bush having started the first and last games. For the Yankees, Charlie Ruffing, Vernon Gomez, George Pipgras and Wilcy Moore turned back the Cub hitters, Moore relieving Johnny Allen in the final game.

That was a great series for the Yankee hitters. Gehrig hit .529, Dickey .437, Combs .375 and Sewell and Ruth each hit .333. That was the series in which the Babe, with two strikes on him, called his shot on Root and hit a home run over the fence in right center.

Joe was all even with Chicago when that series was over — save in one detail: Rogers Hornsby, who had succeeded him as manager of the Cubs, hadn't lasted long enough to oppose him in that series. That was the only circumstance that marred his revenge.

There was a lapse of four years in hostilities between Joe and the league and then they hooked up in 1936, with the Giants representing the league. Joe had to tussle for this one, the Giants going to six games before they were beaten down. Twice — once behind Carl Hubbell and again behind Hal Schumacher — they stalled the Yankee attack and went on to win. In another game, with Fred Fitzsimmons pitching, they lost a heartbreaker, Bump Hadley beating Fitz, 2 to 1 — the game turning on a high-bounding ball that got away from Fitz, probably the best fielding pitcher in baseball.

Gomez won two games in that series and Hadley and Pearson the others, while Ruffing and Pat Malone were beaten. Again the Yankee bats thundered a couple of times, Joe's troops won one game 18 to 4 and another 13 to 5. The Babe had passed from the Yankee array by this time but Joe DiMaggio had come swinging up from the Coast League and Gehrig and Dickey and Lazzeri were still pounding along.

In 1937 the Giants furnished the opposition again — but this time McCarthy turned the pressure on a little harder and the Giants were flattened in five games. Only Carl Hubbell could win for the Giants. He was beaten the first time out but he came back to win the fourth game, taking a decision over Hadley. Meanwhile Gomez, Ruffing and Pearson had won for the Yanks and Gomez, in a return engagement, closed out the series by getting the nod over Cliff Melton.

Lazzeri, winding up his days at the Stadium — he took off his Yankee uniform for the last time after the last game — led his crew in hitting with a mark of .400. Red Rolfe hit .300 and so did Myril Hoag. Gehrig hit .294 and DiMaggio .273. The main surprise, although few noticed it at the time because of the Yankees' very convincing victory, was a .211 batting average for Bill Dickey.

Easiest of All

Last year the challenge came from Chicago and Joe swung West for another triumph — the easiest of all. He had beaten the Cubs four in a row in 1932 but there were times during that series when it seemed the Cubs might possibly win. Last year the Cubs were licked before they started.

Only Gabby Hartnett and Dizzy Dean really stood up against the Yanks, and they weren't nearly enough. Dean gave them a hand-to-hand fight for seven innings and then they crushed him on home runs by Frank Crosetti and DiMaggio. Bill Lee and Clay Bryant—with Lee trying twice — were easy. Joe used only three pitchers, starting and finishing with Ruffing, with Gomez and Pearson in between. Joe Gordon, by way of climaxing his first year in the big show, hit .400. So did Dickey. Gehrig, playing in his last series, although nobody knew it then, hit .286.

Now Joe is ready to move on the National League again. He has the old reliable Gomez-Ruffing-Hadley-Pearson pitching combination to hurl into the fray, plus Marius Russo, rapidly taking his place among the top left-handers of the game. Plus Dickey and Gordon and DiMaggio and Rolfe and the rest of that thumping crew. And, as I said before, the betting is on Joe again.

Plasman Is Back

Chicago, Sept 27—Dick Plasman, Chicago Bears end, has been designated by assistant coach Harold E. "Red" Grange as football's No. 1 comeback for the 1939 season. Plasman, a former Vanderbilt star, was the victim of a freak accident last season, which saw him crash into a concrete wall, just beyond the end zone at Wrigley Field, while attempting to spear a forward pass.

He suffered compound fractures of both wrists. It was feared that the accident would terminate his football career, but he is back again this year playing regularly and Grange asserts he is the most improved player on the squad.

Henry Is Leading Hitter in Softball Playoff Series

Batting and pitching records for the recent South End Booster Softball League championship series, which Keegan's Gassers won with three consecutive victories, show that Mel Henry of Post's Pirates was the leading hitter with an average of 667 for six times at bat and Twigg of the Gassers led pitchers with three straight triumphs.

Second in batting was Joe Wagner of Candy Kitchen with .571 while Orndorff of Candy Kitchen and Hoyle of the Kitcheners tied for third with .500. Hahn of Keegan's was fifth with .400.

Mel Henry and Ed Widdows and Billy Stevenson of Post's and Hoyle of Candy Kitchen each had three hits in one game. Widdows drove out two doubles and batted in four runs in one contest while Stevenson scored three times in one battle.

Mel Henry made four straight hits over a two-game stretch. Candy Kitchen had ten runners left on base in one game. John Spoltore of the Kitcheners hit for the most bases in one clash, six, and Bob Doak, Widdows, Derl Keller and Mel Henry, Post's; Ed Diehl of the Gassers and Harold Fraley of Candy Kitchen each stole one base.

Fifty-one boys took part in the series. The above records will be recognized as such as the playoff this year was the first in South End League history.

Twigg scored two shutouts in winning three games. Meeks of Lacys Delicatets had one no-run battle. Hoyle had five wild pitchers and Weltman two.

Candy Kitchen compiled the best team-batting average with .322. Post's Candy Kitchen and the Gassers each collected four doubles, Foste and Lacy's each had one triple and Candy Kitchen and Keegan's each had one home run with John Spoltore hitting for the circuit for the Kitcheners and "Hezie" Hahn for the Gassers. Widdows, Dieh of Keegan's and Wagner of Candy Kitchen each had two doubles and Mel Henry and Mel Rankin, the latter of the Delicatets, accounted for the two triples.

Post's led in stolen bases with four, Keegan's in sacrifices with seven and Post's in men left on bases with 22. Individual and team batting and pitching records for the series follow:

Lewis Playing Guard

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Sept. 27 (AP)—One of our favorite football teams starts its fall plowing this week and partly from force of habit we are going to pick it to win. We picked it all last season and were doing all right until the Tennessee Vols also picked it in the orange bowl. They picked it to pieces.

The team is Oklahoma, and we have a sentimental interest in it as we have watched it grow more or less from a pup. It is just reaching maturity, and we have the word direct from Jumbo Tom Stidham, the coach, that by the end of the season the Sooners "will likely be almost as strong as last year".

Considering the tendency of football coaches to refer to an oak tree as an acorn, if it is in their back yard, Stidham's statement might be taken as a warning, although we do wish the Sooners hadn't scheduled Northwestern for their second game. And maybe not S. M. U. for the first. There's too much green in the Oklahoma landscape right now.

"Physically, we have much better reserves than last year, when our reserve strength was a myth", Stidham says. "However, many of the reserves are unschooled and we won't be able to cash in on them until they acquire experience.

It's quite a gamble to like the Sooners over S. M. U., as it looks like anybody's ball game Saturday. But we'll take a chance on the Oklahomans, knowing them as we do.

In fact, it's quite a gamble to pick any team in an opening game, as there may not be anything left of a 1938 bombshell but the shell.

However, because we enjoy swinging about from limb to limb, here is what we expect to happen this week:

Kansas to beat Drake, Tennessee to beat North Carolina State, and Denver to beat Iowa State Friday.

Notre Dame to take a close one from Purdue, Indiana to get some overdue revenge against Nebraska, Louisiana State to get back at Mississippi for that surprise licking of last year, U. S. C. to take Oregon, Washington to take Pittsburgh (and we'll take aspirin after trying to figure out that one), Rice to beat Vanderbilt, Missouri to out-pass Colorado, Stanford to start off right against Oregon State, Texas to win over Florida, and Texas A. & M. to out-power Centenary, all on Saturday.

And just to show we're not afraid of the tough ones, we'll put in the Fordham-Waynesburg game. We'll take Fordham before retiring.

Bears Release Seven

Pittsburgh, Sept. 27 — Owner-Coach George Halas of the Chicago Bears announced here today that seven players have been released to the team's Newark American Professional Football Association farm team under option.

Carl Schuelke, former Wisconsin fullback; Ted Key, ex-U.C.L.A. halfback, and Jim Breen, Bill Battles, Bill Raizik, Ken Armstrong and Ole

Sailing Ship Rides Its Smoothest Sea

A bark in full panoply of sail rides a sea of hardwood boards at the 20th Century-Fox studios. It can pitch, roll and list at the will of the director—and it does it very effectively in "Slave Ship," now at the Garden Theatre, starring Warner Baxter, Mickey Rooney and Wallace Beery.

The "Albatross," as it is called, is actually a replica of the last of the great slave barks and the picture itself is based on the last voyage of this notorious outlaw ship of the nineteenth century.

Not all of the ship sequences were taken on the "Albatross," however. The studio had three companies at work in various parts of the world, and spent more than two years in filming some of the spectacular sea sequences for which "Slave Ship" has been so widely acclaimed.

When Glenda Farrell, heroine of "Torchy Runs for Mayor," the Warner Bros. picture now at the Garden Theatre, sews or crochets at home, she likes to sit in a rocking chair with a music box attachment which plays old-fashioned tunes.

"The Rains Came," Zanuck's Greatest

Hats off to Darryl F. Zanuck for his magnificent and faithful production of "The Rains Came," the great Louis Bromfield novel, which 20th Century-Fox presented at the Strand theater yesterday with Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power and George Brent starred at the head of a dazzling cast!

Rarely has a famous book, which has been read and enjoyed by millions, been transferred to the screen with such devoted fidelity, such unsparing care and cost! The result gloriously justifies the effort. Here is a great film!

All the fascinating characters of the book come to vivid life on the screen and every role is perfectly cast and brilliantly played, the evident result of the distinguished Clarence Brown's superlative direction.

Myrna Loy, looking more enchanting than ever, breaks with the "perfect wife" tradition to play the amorous Lady Esketh and she is superb. Tyrone Power is grand as the handsome, high-caste Hindu surgeon, Major Rama Safti, the first real love of Lady Esketh's romance-strewn life; and George Brent gives a splendid account of himself as the world-weary Tom Ransome.

The colorful setting of Bromfield's mythical city of Ranchipur, India, is realistically reproduced and the awesome catastrophes that highlight the novel — the earthquake, the flood, the fire and the pleague—are all reproduced with breath-taking effect. Indeed, in the opinion of this reviewer, there has never been anything in film history to match the spectacle scenes in "The Rains Came."

Zanuck's sensational new discovery, Brenda Joyce, scores heavily in the role of young Fern Simon, whose love gives Ransome a new lease on life, and splendid performances are also turned in by Nigel Bruce as Lord Esketh, Maria Ouspenskaya as the Maharani, Joseph Schildkraut as Mr. Bannerjee, Mary Nash as Miss MacDaid, Jane Darwell as Aunt Phoebe (Mrs Smiley), Marjorie Rambeau as Mrs. Simon, Henry Travers as Rev. Homer Smiley and H. B Warner as the Maharajah.

STAR IN "DESPERATE TRAIL"

'Man From Sundown' and 'Arson Racket Squad'

Closing today at the Embassy Theatre is the double feature, Charles Starrett in the western hit, "Man From Sundown" and Bob Livingston, Rosalind Keith in "Arson Racket Squad." In addition to the two features the third chapter of the serial "Boy Scouts to the Rescue" with Jackie Cooper, will be shown.

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy Theatre will be the double hit with Roy Rogers and Mary Hart in "Rough Riders Round-Up," and Evelyn Venable and Neil Hamilton in "Hollywood Stadium Mystery." In addition to the two features there will be the First Chapter of the New Serial "Mandrake. The Magician," starring Warren Hull, Doris Weston and Ray Downing.

Bob Baker Featured In 'Desperate Trails'

When Bob Baker started out on the road to fame and fortune, he rode a horse.

Of course it was only a year-old pony that his father had given him as a birthday gift, but young Baker trained the animal himself and walked off with a prize at his first rodeo.

Entering films after winning wide recognition as a singing cowboy over national radio networks, Baker's latest screen role is with Johnny Mack Brown in "Desperate Trails," Universal western film starting today at the Liberty Theatre with Fuzzy Knight, Bill Cody Jr., and Frances Robinson.

Ted Fio Rito and His Orchestra in Person at Maryland Today Only

Playing four times on the Maryland Theatre stage today only will be Ted Fio Rito and his famous orchestra of stage, screen and radio fame. Ted Fio Rito comes direct from Hollywood and the Cocoanut Grove, Los Angeles and appears on the Maryland Theatre stage at 1:45, 4, 7, and 9:15 p. m. today only. On the screen will be "Stronger Than Desire," vivid drama of society in New York, brings Virginia Bruce and Walter Pidgeon to the screen, teamed for the second time, in a drama in which heart interest, a happy family, a blackmail plot and a murder mystery vie with each other to grip the audience. It is now playing at the Maryland Theatre.

The story deals with a Manhattan lawyer and his beautiful wife, who become estranged when the wife, suspecting the husband of a flirtation, endeavors to retaliate with one of her own. It enmeshes her in blackmail and a murder mystery in which another woman is accused of what she believes is her own crime. Unearthing of an odd photographic clew and a dexterous dramatic twist solve the mystery. The comedy highlight is a spanking, skillfully administered to pretty Rita Johnson by Pidgeon.

Proving herself an actress of increased stature with every new appearance, Miss Bruce not only looks the glamorous society woman of "Stronger Than Desire," but gives the character sincerity and conviction which rises to moments of intense power in the picture's dramatic courtroom sequence. The reserved and conservative Pidgeon is an able choice for the role of the suave metropolitan lawyer and the production is also aided by the excellent portrayals of Lee Bowman as the villain of the piece, Ann Dvorak as the "other woman," Ilka Chase as the gossipy, bantering but sympathetic friend of the family, the attractive Rita Johnson as a woman-about-town, and also Richard Lane, little Ann Todd, Paul Stanton and Ferike Boros.

"THE RAINS CAME"

Film Based on Hit Play Opens at Liberty Today

"No Place To Go," the Warner Bros. picture featuring Dennis Morgan, Gloria Dickson and Fred Stone, which opens at the Liberty Theatre today, is based on the successful stage play, "Minick," which was written by the brilliant team of Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman.

As adapted sympathetically for the screen by Lee Katz, Lawrence Kimble and Fred Niblo, Jr., it is a homely tale of the eternal problem of the relations between aged parents and children who have reached maturity.

This problem, in its simplest terms, is embraced usually in the question of whether parents should live with their married children. In "No Place To Go" the chief protagonists are Stone as the old father, Morgan as his son and Miss Dickson as the latter's wife.

In addition to the players mentioned, others prominent in the cast include Sonny Bupp, Aldrich Bowker, Charles Halton, Georgia Caine, Frank Faylen, Dennie Moore and Alen Bridge. The production was directed by Terry Morse with a sympathetic understanding.

The best castanets are made of only two or three types of wood, and must be hand-carved in a specific shape to bring out the best tones.

Lutheran Church Has Homecoming At Frostburg

Rally and Series of Services To Be Held Next Week

Frostburg, Sept. 27 — The Rev. Walter V. Simon, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church, this city, and members of the congregation have completed plans for a series of rally and homecoming services intended to enliven interest in and zeal for the work and worship of the church. The services will commence next Sunday morning with the autumn communion service and will be followed by three special services Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings.

Devotional themes for the three week-day services will be "I Need Christ," "Christ Needs Me," and "Christ for the World."

Begining next Wednesday, the church will resume mid-week services which were suspended during the summer months.

St. Paul's church was recently improved and re-decorated at considerable expenses and it is the desire of the congregation to join with other local churches in an effort to attract worshippers at the midweek as well as the Sunday services.

Coal Production Continues To Soar In West Virginia

Thousands of Miners Called Back To Jobs Throughout State

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 17 (AP)—King coal's war-born prosperity, calling back some of the children "deserted" during the lean years, the state auditor's affice found today.

Inquiries looking to the redemption of about 50,000 acres of coal land which were sold to the state for non-payment of taxes have been received recently.

Most of the property under consideration, said Assistant Auditor Cleveland M. Bailey, has been delinquent since the mid-1920's, when the coal industry started its downward trend.

One company has talked about 21,000 acres in Gilmer county, on which the taxes amount to $69.00, it was reported. The remainder of the inquiries about tracts in Braxton, Doddridge, Harrison, Boone, Kanawha, Mingo, Marion, Monongalia and Nicholas, have been received from smaller concerns.

From all fields come continuing reports of increased production with most companies operating the maximum five-day week allowed under the United Mine Worker contract. In some cases, a few companies were staggering shifts so as to be able to work six days a week.

The Fairmont Times had this to say about the "boom":

"Production in Northern West Virginia last week soared to a peak no' equalled since the World War period."

The Williamson field was running 30,000 tons ahead of production figures for two weeks ago, which themselves approached new highs. In that southern area, 30 of 36 reporting mines said they were operating five days a week. Three were working six days.

At Fairmont, President C. Pitmont Davis of UMWA District 6 estibated that 1,500 have found jobs in the northern field since the production pick-up started and predicted that about 2,000 more eventually would be called back.

Coal Production Continues To Soar In West Virginia

Thousands of Miners Called Back To Jobs Throughout State

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 17 (AP)—King coal's war-born prosperity is calling back some of the children "deserted" during the lean years, the state auditor's affice found today.

Inquiries looking to the redemption of about 50,000 acres of coal land which were sold to the state for non-payment of taxes have been received recently.

Most of the property under consideration, said Assistant Auditor Cleveland M. Bailey, has been delinquent since the mid-1920's, when the coal industry started its downward trend.

One company has talked about 21,000 acres in Glimer county, on which the taxes amount to $69,000, it was reported. The remainder of the inquiries about tracts in Braxton Doddridge, Harrison, Boone, Kanawha, Mingo, Marion, Monongalia and Nicholas, have been received from smaller concerns.

From all fields come continuing reports of increased production with most companies operating the maximum five-day week allowed under the United Mine Worker contract. In some cases, a few companies were staggering shifts so as to be able to work six days a week.

The Fairmont Times had this to say about the "boom":

"Production in Northern West Virginia last week soared to a peak no equalled since the World War period."

The Williamson field was running 30,000 tons ahead of production figures for two weeks ago, which themselves approached new highs.

In that southern area, 30 of 35 reporting mines said they were operating five days a week. Three were working six days.

At Fairmont, President C. Fremont Davis of UMWA District 31 estibated that 1,500 have found jobs in the northern field since the production pick-up started and predicted that about 2,000 more eventually would be called back.

Eight room dwelling with bath, pantry, practically new hot water heating plant and porches. Located No. 110 Pennsylvania avenue, on a valuable lot and in a good neighborhood. The cost of conditioning this property plus converting it into a duplex dwelling would be comparatively low. Purchaser could occupy one half while the other half produces sufficient revenue to pay all overhead expense and 6% interest on large part of the total investment. One way to buy a home and pay for it easily. It would be very difficult to find as much property so well located, at so low a price. If interested act promptly while this property is available.

LOCAL COMMUNISTS TO RALLY HERE SUNDAY

Handbills Passed Out To Announce Meeting

Mother Bloor Named As Chief Speaker In Hotel Ballroom

Local Communists, whose work (if any) has been kept in underground channels, announced yesterday they are holding a public meeting Sunday at 2:30 p. m. in the ball room of the Queen City hotel.

They made their announcement, of course, by passing handbills on the city's streets.

They successfully outsmarted city police, for one day, at least.

No Arrests Made

No arrests were made yesterday, despite the fact that police are on the lookout for unlicensed handbill passers these days because the city administration has chosen to make an issue of its handbill licensing ordinance.

The mimeographed handbills the Communists passed out yesterday were not signed. But they stated that Sunday's meeting will be under the auspices of "The Communist Party of Western Maryland."

City's First

This is the first time such an organization has been heard from in Cumberland.

Oldtimers said last night, too, that as far as they know Sunday's meeting will be the first public Communist meeting in Cumberland.

The handbill announced that Mother Ella R. Bloor, 78-year-old agitator and national figure of International Communism, will speak at the Cumberland rally.

The handbill carries a drawing of a newsboy shouting extra.

Handbill Quoted

It says:

"Come and hear Mother Ella R. Bloor.

"STOP, LOOK, AND READ

"Mother Bloor, 78-year-old People's champion of progress, will be the main speaker at a mass meeting which will be held in the Queen City hotel ballroom on Sunday, Oct. 1, at 2:30 p. m.

"This friend and co-worker of the late Eugene V. Debs and many other labor leaders, past and present, has the energy and vitality of young womanhood.

"Mother Bloor was formerly a member of the Socialist party, charter member of the Communist party of the United States, now a member of the national committee of the Communist party.

"This famous lady has a long record of fighting for woman suffrage, civil liberties, and a participant of many struggles on the picket-line, and for peace and democracy. Her latter years have been devoted in touring the country and speaking to the American people. Mother Bloor will speak on many subjects, and will use her many experiences as the basis.

" 'How can America stay out of the war and help to bring a real peace in the world?'

" 'The people's battle for progress in the 1940 elections'.

" 'Women of Yesterday and Today.'

" 'The American Tradition and Religious Freedom.'

" 'The Trade Union Movement and the Communist Party.'

" Don't fail to hear this speaker. Sunday, Oct. 21, at 2:30 p. m. sharp. Queen City Hotel Ballroom, Auspices: the Communist Party of Western Maryland.

"Admission Free.

All welcome."

American Legion 'Studies' Communistic Move

A delegation of American Legionnaires, who had heard about the Communist meeting in a radio broadcast, called at The News office last night to borrow a copy of the handbill.

They took it to Legion headquarters to show to other members and "for further study".

They later returned it, and announced that "appropriate steps to be taken had been agreed upon and would be disclosed later".

An attempt by the Legion members to have the rental of the Queen City hotel ballroom for the meeting cancelled was unsuccessful, they said.

Conlon Against It

City Commissioner Thomas J. Conlon read the Communist handbill in The News office last night and said, "I want to be quoted as a citizen as being against this sort of thing".

141 Voted Communist

In the last election, 141 citizens of Allegany county voted for Communist Candidate Harry Straw for U. S. Senator, Straw led his party's ticket in the county. Communist Samuel Gordon got forty-three votes for governor.

Death Curve Up for Another Damage Suit

City Lost First, but Appeal Is Still Pending

The city's so-called "death curve" atop Washington street hill resulted in docketing of another suit in Circuit court yesterday.

The plaintiff this time is Oscar Turney, father of Milton Turney who was awarded damages of $2,500 at the April term of Circuit court for injuries received when the car he occupied overturned on the curve last Nov. 6.

The jury's verdict was appealed by City Attorney Charles Z. Haskett, and the case is pending on the October docket of the Court of Appeals.

Mr. Turney will ask $3,000 for hospital expenses of his son and compensation for loss of his earnings, according to Attorney Lewis M. Wilson, who docketed the suit and who represented young Turney in the first suit. The youth was a messenger boy.

Stanley Stark, driver of the car in which young Turney was riding, also has a suit pending against the city as a result of the crash.

The plaintiffs are all from Oakland.

The "death curve" case was one of several suits docketed yesterday, most of them growing out of motor vehicle crashes.

Attorney Wilson also filed suit in the name of Clarabelle Courtney and Effie Platt, both of Cumberland, against John B. Donaldson, executor of the estate of Walter M. Donaldson.

Each claims damages of $10,000 for injuries received in a crash near Spring Gap early on the morning of June 11, in which Donaldson was killed. The two women were riding with him when the auto failed to make a curve on the down-grade, snapped off a power pole, and crashed into a culvert. Both were seriously injured.

Mrs. Pamela S. Young, middle-aged Washington widow, is the plaintiff in a suit for $10,000 against the Martz Cab company.

Represented by Attorney Wilson also, she claims damages for a crash with a Martz cab on the Henderson boulevard last January. The suit names Asa G. Martz and Regina M. Martz as co-defendants.

Mrs. Margaret C. Rank docketed suit against two insurance companies for double-indemnity claims in the death of her husband, John Rank, last June.

In a declaration filed by Attorney Charles Z. Heskett in her suit against the Monumental Life Insurance company, she asks damages of $1,500 for the company's failure to make payment of $1,000 on two policies under which she was the husband's beneficiary.

Another suit was filed by the same against the Prudential Insurance Company of America.

The declaration sets forth that Mr. Rank was accidentally injured June 17 and died June 21 as a result of the injuries, and that the Monumental company refused to pay the claims under the policies.

The policies were each for $1,000 with double-indemnity provisions according to the suit.

County Board Asked To Review Tax Assessments

Double Cash Value of Some Properties, Judge Doub Declares

The county commissioners today had promised to review tax assessments on several Washington street properties and vacant lots on Fayette street following a protest registered yesterday by the owners.

The protests were made by former Judge Albert A. Doub, D. F. McMullen and Frederick A. Puderbaugh, attorneys for McMullen Brothers, and Joseph B. Finan.

In presenting their case, Judge Doub called the commissioners' attention to the fact that the law provides that properties shall be assessed at their cash value.

He cited recent sales and offers of sale to show that assessments for his property and other properties in his neighborhood are far in excess and in some cases more than double the amount these properties have been or can be sold for.

The commissioners stated yesterday that the requested review would be made and that reductions would be made only if the situation warranted it.

Building Permits Drop During September; Year's Total High

September building permits fell below the record for September of last year, City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer said yesterday in compiling his monthly checkup on construction.

Twenty-two permits were issued this month compared to twenty-eight for September of last year. The permits call for $29,970 worth of construction. Last September's totals called for $53,854 worth of building.

However, building for the year continued far ahead of last year's total, Mr. Rizer said. To date, permits issued this year call for $730,997 worth of construction compared to $254,785 worth of building over a similar period of time last year.

With three months yet to be added, city permits are only two less than for all of last year. In 1938 there were 209 permits. Yesterday's total for this year stood at 207.

The cost of building for this year is already more than twice the amount spent last year over the twelve month period.

Council Provides More WPA Work

The mayor and city council today had virtually decided on proposed water line improvements which would provide work for all WPA men now on the employed list.

At a meeting yesterday attended by F. W. Springer, area supervisor for the WPA, the mayor and council approved extending the water line on the McMullen Highway for 1,400 feet from the Celanese plant towards Cresaptown.

The group also decided to extend a branch line of six-inch pipe off the main 20-inch line into the Fairgo area.

Bricks removed from Harrison street will be used on Cumberland street if they are in good condition, the group decided yesterday. Harrison street will be given a new foundation and black-topped. The street car rails are being removed.

Oldtown Man Released On Bond in Still Case

Robert F. Shaw, 28-year-old Oldtown roads worker, was at liberty under $1,000 bond today pending a hearing Monday on charges of operating an unlicensed still.

Shaw, arrested Tuesday night by Charles E. Cushwa and David H. Walker, of the federal alcohol tax unit pleaded not guilty yesterday when arraigned before United States Commissioner James Alfred Aviett.

The agents reported they seized a 75-gallon still, five barrels of mash, and about a gallon of whiskey in a raid about five miles north of Oldtown. Another man escaped, they said.

A plea to keep young America out of Europe's bloody quarrels was featured yesterday in the year's first issue of the Alcohi Mirror, student newspaper at Allegany high school.

Three Get U. S. Prison Terms

Three Allegany county citizens and a young New Yorker apprehended here were sentenced yesterday to varying terms in federal prisons as they were tried in United States district court in Baltimore.

Stiffest sentence handed out by Judge W. Calvin Chesnut went to Anthony Olese, 27-year-old New Yorker, arrested here last month for violation of the Dyer national motor vehicle theft act. He pleaded guilty to stealing a truck from Freeport, N. Y., and was sentenced to three years.

New York authorities, meanwhile, placed a detainer against him as a parole violator.

Robert McKinley, Loartown youth, was sentenced to a year and a day, also on Dyer act charges, to which he likewise pleaded guilty.

Luther A. Bittinger, 22-year-old Cumberland youth was sentenced to a year and a day for forging and cashing a government relief check.

He was convicted of taking a $37.29 relief check belonging to Robert Hite, also of Cumberland. Bittinger was arrested in Denver, Colo., and returned to Maryland for trial.

John W. Puffenburger, arrested by federal agents in July, received a month's sentence on liquor charges. Agents said he had been paroled in 1937 in Circuit court here for five years on a larceny charge.

When's Thanksgiving in Cumberland? Darned if we know. Neither do you.

Neither do school oficials. They don't even know when the schools' Thanksgiving holidays will be. A call to the school superintendent's office last night got the reply that school officials are waiting on Governor O'Conor's proclamation.

If the Guv strings along with President Roosevelt, schools will close at 1 p. m. Wednesday, Nov. 22, and not open until the following Monday.

But if the Guv decides that the Free State shall still celebrate Thanksgiving on the last Thursday in November, then the schools will not close until Nov. 29 and open again Dec. 4.

Most students would prefer celebrating twice. Restaurants and markets would like to sell two holiday dinners, too. And it wouldn't hurt any of us to be thankful twice.

But doggone it, Guv, we would like to know when we're supposed to celebrate.

Congratulations to the Alcohi Mirror editors on their editorial plea for American alofness from the European war.

We believe their fellow students agree with them. And we hope that in the hard years to come (if the war does go on) that they will not forget what they have written.

There's a poem in the school paper, too, by Dorothy Thrush, a senior. It is about the war, and called "Over There". It ends,

"What to do? Let it stay over there—
And not come to our native land!"

Over there it's everybody's war. If America were in, it would be a young people's war — theirs and those who love them.

Thank God the young people are thinking about it, and, as we believe, thinking straight.

Something new in advertising (at least we think it is something new) is the local department store's ad in the Alcohi Mirror featuring the picture of an Allegany high girl modeling one of the store's smarter numbers.

Papa stills pays, but advertisers who are smart know its the younger generation which has the say.

The picture, by the way, is of Meredith Kelley. Very pretty and professional looking, too..

If it's not one thing, it's another. We are referring to the rally of Western Maryland Communists on tap at the Queen City hotel ballroom for Sunday.

This may serve to keep our minds on American problems instead of Europe's misfortunes.

City's Oldest Citizen Dies at 97; Baked Bread for Civil War Troops

Three generations mourned today the death of Cumberland's oldest resident.

She was Mrs. Elmira Frances McAdams, who died at the age of 97 late Tuesday night.

Her death came exactly four months after she had celebrated her 97th birthday on May 26.

Was Never "Old"

Despite the fact that her life had spanned nearly a century, she wasn't "old," relatives were quick to point out last night as they sat in the parlor of her attractive home at 749 Maryland avenue and recalled in hushed tones her vitality and her kindliness.

This point they stressed when they were asked to recount some of the interesting incidents which Mrs. McAdams must have witnessed in her long life.

Didn't Reminisce

Mrs. Harry C. McAdams, a daughter-in-law, of Washington, pondered a moment, then said, "Mother didn't reminisce."

"You know folks reminisce when they're old. And mother didn't reminisce because she wasn't old."

Mrs. Laura Lewis, only surviving child of the grand old lady, with whom she had shared her home for the past twenty years, nodded in agreement.

Baked Bread For Soldiers

So did Robert K. Lewis, a grandson. But he thought a moment and then recalled that he heard Grandmother tell of busy days of baking bread at her Magnolia, W. Va., home for Union troops who were encamped at Paw Paw during the Civil War.

Mrs. McAdams' husband, John McAdams, had reluctantly left his young bride (She was only 19 when the war began) to march off to fight on the Union side. He died nearly thirty years ago.

Saw America In Four Wars

In Mrs. McAdams's lifetime, this country had been involved in four wars. She was a child of four when the Mexican war broke out in 1846; a young bride during the Civil War; a woman of 56 at the time of the Spanish-American War; and a woman of 72 when the World War started.

Then, at the age of 97, she was too ill to know that the world had again plunged into war and that the United States was fighting desperately to keep from becoming involved.

Saw Too Much Of War

She never said much about war, but she had an abiding "aversion" to it, her daughter-in-law noted. She had seen too much of it—and the futility of it.

Although relatives were unable to tell of the many interesting experiences which Mrs. McAdams undoubtedly underwent as the United States came of age, they had no difficulty remembering her as a mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother—in short, as a warm, human personality, standing out in retrospect as far more important than the events history has recorded.

Lived Christian Life

Kindness, integrity, honor, fairness—these were among the words they used to talk about her.

She was a member of Centre Street Methodist church and as active as her age would permit. But she didn't need to go to church, relatives declared.

"She lived the life of a real Christian in every way," they said proudly.

Mrs. Adams was kind not only in deed, but in word and thought as well, they added. She was a living embodiment of Christianity's Golden Rule.

Ill Only Short While

This grand old lady, whose death has brought sadness to many, was intensely active up until about three months ago, when illness forced her to take her bed.

Instead of reminiscing, she had kept posted on current events and was an avid reader of the newspapers.

Why, she could sit down and carry on as intelligent a conversation on what was going on as you and I," relatives recalled. "She had a judicial mind and carefully weighed matters before reaching decisions.

Mind Remained Keen

She had a keen mind, too, and kept possession of all her faculties until the last. Her daughter-in-law remembered her letters as models of grammar, spelling and penmanship as well as coherence.

She recalled, too, her quilt-making activities. She made two beautiful quilts at the age of 89 without the use of spectacles. And fine work they were, too.

Loved Flowers

Mrs. McAdams had come here twenty years ago from the little town of Magnolia, W. Va., where she was born May 26, 1842. She preferred the country, but she soon adjusted herself to living in the city.

But she kept many of her country ideals—an intense love of her family and an abiding loyalty to it; a love of home; and an interest in flowers. She was religious in her care of the flowers which made the yard of the Maryland avenue home a place of beauty.

Spirt Lives in Home

The body of Mrs. McAdams lies in state in the parlor of the little home surrounded by the flowers she loved, and relatives tiptoe up to it to pay their last respects.

But long after that body is laid to rest in the earth which she also loved, her spirit will remain in that house. And the world will be a better place for her having lived in it.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Laura Lewis, her daughter, and Robert K. Lewis, a grandson, are three other grandsons, Claud M. Terrell, of New York City; John McAdams, of Washington, and Harry Clay McAdams, of Baltimore, and a great-granddaughter, Juanita Lewis of Cumberland.

Children Were Well Known

Mrs. McAdams was the mother, too, of the late Harry C. McAdams, of the Interstate Commerce Commisison in Washington, formerly a Baltimore and Ohio railroad official here; the late Dr. John C. McAdams, a Cumberland dentist; and the late Robert McAdams, an engineer for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

She was a daughter of the late William and Susan Johnson House.

Handbills Passed Out To Announce Meeting

Mother Bloor Named As Chief Speaker In Hotel Ballroom

Local Communists, whose work (if any) has been kept in underground channels, announced yesterday they are holding a public meeting Sunday at 2:30 p. m. in the ball room of the Queen City hotel.

They made their announcement, of course, by passing handbills on the city's streets.

They successfully outsmarted city police, for one day, at least.

No Arrests Made

No arrests were made yesterday, despite the fact that police are on the lookout for unlicensed handbill passers these days because the city administration has chosen to make an issue of its handbill licensing ordinance.

The mimeographed handbills the Communists passed out yesterday were not signed. But they stated that Sunday's meeting will be under the auspices of "The Communist Party of Western Maryland."

City's First

This is the first time such an organization has been heard from in Cumberland.

Oldtimers said last night, too, that as far as they know Sunday's meeting will be the first public Communist meeting in Cumberland.

The handbill announced that Mother Ella R. Bloor, 78-year-old agitator and national figure of International Communism, will speak at the Cumberland rally.

The handbill carries a drawing of a newsboy shouting extra.

Handbill Quoted

It says:

"Come and hear Mother Ella R. Bloor.

"STOP, LOOK, AND READ

"Mother Bloor, 78-year-old People's champion of progress, will be the main speaker at a mass meeting which will be held in the Queen City hotel ballroom on Sunday, Oct. 1, at 2:30 p. m.

"This friend and co-worker of the late Eugene V. Debs and many other labor leaders, past and present, has the energy and vitality of young womanhood.

"Mother Bloor was formerly a member of the Socialist party, charter member of the Communist party of the United States, now a member of the national committee of the Communist party.

"This famous lady has a long record of fighting for woman suffrage, civil liberties, and a participant of many struggles on the picket-line, and for peace and democracy. Her latter years have been devoted in touring the country and speaking to the American people. Mother Bloor will speak on many subjects, and will use her many experiences as the basis.

" 'How can America stay out of the war and help to bring a real peace in the world?'

" 'The people's battle for progress in the 1940 elections'.

" 'Women of Yesterday and Today.'

" 'The American Tradition and Religious Freedom.'

" 'The Trade Union Movement and the Communist Party.'

" Don't fail to hear this speaker. Sunday, Oct. 21, at 2:30 p. m. sharp. Queen City Hotel Ballroom. Auspices: the Communist Party of Western Maryland.

"Admission Free.

All welcome."

American Legion 'Studies' Communistic Move

A delegation of American Legionnaires, who had heard about the Communist meeting in a radio broadcast, called at The News office last night to borrow a copy of the handbill.

They took it to Legion headquarters to show to other members and "for further study".

They later returned it, and announced that "appropriate steps to be taken had been agreed upon and would be disclosed later".

An attempt by the Legion members to have the rental of the Queen City hotel ballroom for the meeting cancelled was unsuccessful, they said.

Conlon Against It

City Commissioner Thomas J. Conlon read the Communist handbill in The News office last night and said, "I want to be quoted as a citizen as being against this sort of thing".

141 Voted Communist

In the last election, 141 citizens of Allegany county voted for Communist Candidate Harry Straw for U. S. Senator. Straw led his party's ticket in the county. Communist Samuel Gordon got forty-three votes for governor.

Death Curve Up for Another Damage Suit

City Lost First, but Appeal Is Still Pending

And not come to our native land!"

Over there it's everybody's war. If America were in, it would be a young people's war — theirs and those who love them.

Thank God the young people are thinking about it, and, as we believe, thinking straight.

Something new in advertising (at least we think it is something new) is the local department store's ad in the Alcohi Mirror featuring the picture of an Allegany high girl modeling one of the store's smarter numbers.

Papa stills pays, but advertisers who are smart know its the younger generation which has the say.

The picture, by the way, is of Meredith Kelley. Very pretty and professional looking, too.

If it's not one thing, it's another. We are referring to the rally of Western Maryland Communists on tap at the Queen City hotel ballroom for Sunday.

This may serve to keep our minds on American problems instead of Europe's misfortunes.

City's Oldest Citizen Dies at 97; Baked Bread for Civil War Troops

Three generations mourned today the death of Cumberland's oldest resident.

She was Mrs. Elmira Frances McAdams, who died at the age of 97 late Tuesday night.

Her death came exactly four months after she had celebrated her 97th birthday on May 26.

Was Never "Old"

Despite the fact that her life had spanned nearly a century, she wasn't "old," relatives were quick to point out last night as they sat in the parlor of her attractive home at 749 Maryland avenue and recalled in hushed tones her vitality and her kindliness.

This point they stressed when they were asked to recount some of the interesting incidents which Mrs. McAdams must have witnessed in her long life.

Didn't Reminisce

Mrs. Harry C. McAdams, a daughter-in-law, of Washington, pondered a moment, then said, "Mother didn't reminisce."

"You know folks reminisce when they're old. And mother didn't reminisce because she wasn't old."

Mrs. Laura Lewis, only surviving child of the grand old lady, with whom she had shared her home for the past twenty years, nodded in agreement.

Baked Bread For Soldiers

So did Robert K. Lewis, a grandson. But he thought a moment and then recalled that he heard Grandmother tell of busy days of baking bread at her Magnolia, W. Va., home for Union troops who were encamped at Paw Paw during the Civil War.

Mrs. McAdams' husband, John McAdams, had reluctantly left his young bride (She was only 19 when the war began) to march off to fight on the Union side. He died nearly thirty years ago.

Saw America In Four Wars

In Mrs. McAdams's lifetime, this country had been involved in four wars. She was a child of four when the Mexican war broke out in 1846; a young bride during the Civil War; a woman of 56 at the time of the Spanish-American War; and a woman of 72 when the World War started.

Then, at the age of 97, she was too ill to know that the world had again plunged into war and that the United States was fighting desperately to keep from becoming involved.

Saw Too Much Of War

She never said much about war, but she had an abiding "aversion" to it, her daughter-in-law noted. She had seen too much of it—and the futility of it.

Although relatives were unable to tell of the many interesting experiences which Mrs. McAdams undoubtedly underwent as the United States came of age, they had no difficulty remembering her as a mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother—in short, as a warm, human personality, standing out in retrospect as far more important than the events history has recorded.

Lived Christian Life

Kindness, integrity, honor, fairness—these were among the words they used to talk about her.

She was a member of Centre Street Methodist church and as active as her age would permit. But she didn't need to go to church, relatives declared.

"She lived the life of a real Christian in every way," they said proudly.

Mrs. Adams was kind not only in deed, but in word and thought as well, they added. She was a living embodiment of Christianity's Golden Rule.

Ill Only Short While

This grand old lady, whose death has brought sadness to many, was intensely active up until about three months ago, when illness forced her to take her bed.

Instead of reminiscing, she had kept posted on current events and was an avid reader of the newspapers.

Why, she could sit down and carry on as intelligent a conversation on what was going on as you and I," relatives recalled. "She had a judicial mind and carefully weighed matters before reaching decisions.

Mind Remained Keen

She had a keen mind, too, and kept possession of all her faculties until the last. Her daughter-in-law remembered her letters as models of grammar, spelling and penmanship as well as coherence.

She recalled, too, her quilt-making activities. She made two beautiful quilts at the age of 89 without the use of spectacles. And fine work they were, too.

Loved Flowers

Mrs. McAdams had come here twenty years ago from the little town of Magnolia, W. Va., where she was born May 26, 1842. She preferred the country, but she soon adjusted herself to living in the city.

But she kept many of her country ideals—an intense love of her family and an abiding loyalty to it; a love of home; and an interest in flowers. She was religious in her care of the flowers which made the yard of the Maryland avenue home a place of beauty.

Spirt Lives in Home

The body of Mrs. McAdams lies in state in the parlor of the little home surrounded by the flowers she loved, and relatives tiptoe up to it to pay their last respects.

But long after that body is laid to rest in the earth which she also loved, her spirit will remain in that house. And the world will be a better place for her having lived in it.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Laura Lewis, her daughter, and Robert K. Lewis, a grandson, are three other grandsons, Claud M. Terrell, of New York City; John McAdams, of Washington, and Harry Clay McAdams, of Baltimore, and a great-granddaughter, Juanita Lewis of Cumberland.

Children Were Well Known

Mrs. McAdams was the mother, too, of the late Harry C. McAdams, of the Interstate Commerce Commisison in Washington, formerly a Baltimore and Ohio railroad official here; the late Dr. John C. McAdams, a Cumberland dentist; and the late Robert McAdams, an engineer for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

She was a daughter of the late William and Susan Johnson House.

County Board Asked To Review Tax Assessments

Double Cash Value of Some Properties, Judge Doub Declares

The county commissioners today had promised to review tax assessments on several Washington street properties and vacant lots on Fayette street following a protest registered yesterday by the owners.

The protests were made by former Judge Albert A. Doub, D. F. McMullen and Frederick A. Puderbaugh, attorneys for McMullen Brothers, and Joseph B. Finan.

In presenting their case, Judge Doub called the commissioners' attention to the fact that the law provides that properties shall be assessed at their cash value.

He cited recent sales and offers of sale to show that assessments for his property and other properties in his neighborhood are far in excess and in some cases more than double the amount these properties have been or can be sold for.

The commissioners stated yesterday that the requested review would be made and that reductions would be made only if the situation warranted it.

Three Get U. S. Prison Terms

Three Allegany county citizens and a young New Yorker apprehended here were sentenced yesterday to varying terms in federal prisons as they were tried in United States district court in Baltimore.

Stiffest sentence handed out by Judge W. Calvin Chesnut went to Anthony Olese, 27-year-old New Yorker, arrested here last month for violation of the Dyer national motor vehicle theft act. He pleaded guilty to stealing a truck from Freeport, N. Y., and was sentenced to three years.

New York authorities, meanwhile, placed a detainer against him as a parole violator.

Robert McKinley, Loartown youth, was sentenced to a year and a day, also on Dyer act charges, to which he likewise pleaded guilty.

Luther A. Bittinger, 22-year-old Cumberland youth was sentenced to a year and a day for forging and cashing a government relief check.

He was convicted of taking a $37.29 relief check belonging to Robert Hite, also of Cumberland. Bittinger was arrested in Denver, Colo., and returned to Maryland for trial.

John W. Puffenburger, arrested by federal agents in July, received a month's sentence on liquor charges. Agents said he had been paroled in 1937 in Circuit court here for five years on a larceny charge.

Building Permits Drop During September; Year's Total High

September building permits fell below the record for September of last year, City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer said yesterday in compiling his monthly checkup on construction.

Twenty-two permits were issued this month compared to twenty-eight for September of last year. The permits call for $29,970 worth of construction. Last September's totals called for $53,854 worth of building.

However, building for the year continued far ahead of last year's total, Mr. Rizer said. To date, permits issued this year call for $730,997 worth of construction compared to $254,785 worth of building over a similar period of time last year.

With three months yet to be added, city permits are only two less than for all of last year. In 1938 there were 209 permits. Yesterday's total for this year stood at 207.

The cost of building for this year is already more than twice the amount spent last year over the twelve month period.
